Tiger brings golf, life skills to community

By BARATO BRITT
Staff Writer

Fresh off of two consecutive victories, the most recent last Sunday at the Memorial, and en route to the U.S. Open; no one would balk at PGA golf phenomenon Eldrick "Tiger" Woods for wanting a little rest.

No one, that is, except Tiger himself.

Intent on bringing the game that has propelled him to astronomical heights to the most remote areas of the inner city, Tiger and his foundation found time to visit Indianapolis this week to teach life and golf skills to city youth.

The Indianapolis visit is the latest stop in the foundation's continuing effort to reach out through a sport once thought too affluent for inner city kids.

"So many kids have been told that they couldn't play this game, it doesn't feel good," said Tiger, who knows first hand being prohibited to play on several courses in his short lifetime. "I just wanted the kids to have the same opportunity I had.

"Don't get me wrong, winning (Sunday's) tournament was great, but there's nothing better than changing a child's life," Woods added. "Something I've always wanted to do is make a difference. I think we're doing that. We're having a tremendous impact."

Annually, the Tiger Woods Foundation brings its mission to five cities, which are chosen based on that city's overall efforts to bring golf to all children.

This year, Indianapolis was chosen because of record growth with its junior golf programs, which include the Lee Elder, Glenn Howard and the various Douglass Park junior golf programs. Russell Taylor,

TWF visit a testament to local efforts

How many kids can say that meeting Michael Jordan is second on the list of great things they've done?

For 14 year-old Bryan Floyd, that became the case on Monday.

Floyd, a ball boy for the Indiana Pacers, has met some of the NBA's best, including "His Airness." At that time, the experience was an achievement he thought he would never top.

But Floyd, an aspiring golfer, not only met the world's hottest golfer in Tiger Woods, he got one-on-one golf tips from the 1997 Masters Champion.

"I never thought I would get to that point," said Floyd, who admitted hitting the "slice" a lot more with Tiger watching, the result of nervous jitters. "It's great and exciting, but it felt kinda

IBE plans stellar lineup for Summer Celebration

By CAROLENE MAYES
Recorder President and General Manager

In recent years Indiana Black Expo has put an emphasis on family by incorporating more youth and family-focused events during its annual Summer Celebration. "Preparing Our Community For A New Millennium," the theme of the IBE 1999 Summer Celebration, continues to encompass family, fun and excitement, while capitalizing on the inevitability and issues of the future.

Though many think of Summer Celebration as merely a weekend of great concerts and exhibits, IBE offers a full week of events for the family, with several of those events focusing on the importance of preparedness and the basis of education.

The events kick off on July 12 with a golf tournament, business conference and the much anticipated guest Rev. Al Sharpton, who will speak at Light of the World Christian Church. Other events during the week include a youth basketball camp, jazz concert, Children's Day at the Convention Center, a job preparedness workshop, an employment opportunity fair and a health forum featuring former U.S. Surgeon General Joycelyn Elders, in addition to many other activities.

All of these events occur before the IBE Corporate Luncheon which has been viewed by the community as the Summer Celebration commencement event. The annual luncheon features awards presentations to well renowned and deserving persons. This year's award recipients are nationally-acclaimed music producers Jimmy Jam and Terry Lewis; John Jordan "Buck" O'Neil, major league baseball's first Black coach; Broad Ripple High School graduate and the Chicago Bears standout Roosevelt Colvin and Dr. Joycelyn Elders.

The exhibits, which open July 16, will offer an array of businesses, corporations and not-for-profit organizations, all with a story to tell and an item or service to sell. With over 1,000 exhibitors surely everyone will find something of interest.

In addition to the Indiana State Department of Health Black and Minority Health Fair, where participants can receive free health screenings valued at more than $500, Expo will present the Age of Communications Village, the "Free At Last: A History of the Abolition of Slavery in America" exhibit; and the IBE Youth Summit.

To highlight this year's theme IBE will introduce the Millennium Room, which will offer information, literature and speakers addressing Y2K concerns and issues such as transportation, banking, federal and state assistance programs and computer technology.

Though Summer Celebration is not just exhibits and concerts, the music is always a highly anticipated part of the schedule. In addition to an exciting week of events, speakers and exhibits, IBE has charted a stellar lineup of guest artists for the weekend's concerts.

This year's Music Heritage Festival offers a fabulous variety of music from old-school, R&B funk, ballads, to jazz.

Music Heritage Festival I, which occurs July 16, features The Gap Band, Morris Day and Jenny Burton Experience. As always, the event is free of charge.

Music Heritage Festival II features The Isley Brothers along with Teena Marie, Jeffrey Osborne, The Emotions, and Brick. Sunday night's Festival conclusion fea-

'Black Indianapolis' update

Recorder Staff Report

The State of Black Indianapolis agenda is steamrolling its way into the summer, as convenors released additional reports and increased outreach efforts.

Last week, Housing Report facilitators Indianapolis Housing Authority Director Eugene Jones and former Deputy Mayor Nancy Silvers Rogers presented their report, citing several dilemmas which have kept African Americans from reaching their dreams of homeownership.

With the housing report, convenors looked not just at current dilemmas, but the ramifications of decisions made by those who practice poor financial management.

Often times, according to the report, parents ruin their child's chances for good credit by placing their children's names on utility bills. To battle this growing trend, report convenors said community leaders must become vocal and visible in facilitating credit management workshops.

An additional effort housing reporters cited was the inception of a one-stop plan, which according to Jones can equate into a facility in which consumers and families can go to meet a variety of housing needs.

Instead of the expected family report, which will be delivered at the June 24 mass meeting, Marion County Health Department Director Dr. Virginia Caine

'Recorder Lady' will be missed

The Indianapolis Recorder lost a piece of its history as Marie Addie Miles Stephens Dueson, The Recorder's most faithful courier, passed away June 5.

Dueson, 84, has been a part of The Recorder family for over 50 years, as she began handling routes for the paper when it was still located on Indiana Avenue. At one time, she served over 900 customers faithfully and always in a timely manner. In fact, Dueson gained the title of "The Recorder Lady" because of her outstanding service, which customers speak highly of even today. Dueson's tenure is deeply embedded into rich history of The Recorder and, with her passing, she takes her place as one of its most influential employees.

Not just a staple in The Recorder history, Dueson's efforts around the city were equally noteworthy. A 60-year member of Bethel AME, she was active in several community organizations, including the Cub and Boy Scouts, the Tillman H. Harpole American Legion Post Ladies Auxiliary and her exemplary efforts as a foster parent and grandparent.

Dueson, the widow of musician Hilliard Dueson, is survived by children William Stephens, Judith Ann Carpenter, Michelle Davis, Cynthia Casanova; sisters Martha Ann Harris, Janice Cox; stepsisters Leola Clark, Elizabeth Perry; eight grandchildren; 26 great-grandchildren and two great-great grandchildren.

Homegoing services for "The Recorder Lady" will be at 1 p.m. June 11 in Stuart Mortuary, with calling from 5 to 8 p.m. June 10. Burial services will be in Forest Lawn Memorial Gardens in Greenwood.

Memorial contributions may be made to the church renovation fund or The College Fund, UNCF.

Community leaders offer solution for youth violence

The process of conflict mediation will be the topic of community youth and development specialist Fred Deel's workshop, "Stop the Hate: Mediate," which will be held June 10-13. Deel, along with colleague Scott Kleon, will present the workshop during the upcoming international community leadership conference.

The upcoming conference expects to draw some 1,100 community leaders representing 49 states and 12 countries worldwide. According to workshop officials, the event is being conducted due to the recent surge in school shootings and the rise in violent behavior. For more information, call 637-7408 or visit the sponsoring organization's websites at www.communityleadership.org or www.greenleaf.org.

Bringing each report together was the Conveyor Report, presented by Elder Lionel Rush. According to Rush's report, agenda representatives have, in the last month, achieved the following tasks:

- Met with the Greater Indianapolis Progress Committee's Race Relations Leadership Network
- Worked with Light of the World's Bishop T. Garrett Benjamin in the creation of a "Safe Schools" initiative, and
- Worked with the Marion County Health Department on the High Blood Pressure and Syphilis projects.

Since last week's meeting, several representatives of the agenda have also taken the agenda's mission to various community centers and apartment complexes. Most notably, agenda convenors held a meeting at the Port-O-Call Apartments with the theme "Spread the Love." According to Rush, several representatives were disturbed by calls and news of increased violence and drug activity in that area, which eventually led to their own investigation. The result, Rush said, was the creation of a city-wide policy to meet with neighborhoods and deliver the specific reports most relevant to that area.

The next meeting will be held at the Julia Carson Center, June 24 at 5:30 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

wierd to have him there watching me hit."

Floyd was one of approximately 100 kids lucky enough to take part in a most special golf clinic this week at Riverside Golf Academy. For one day, area youth were taught by several of the country's best golf instructors and Woods, who has won the last two tournament he has played in.

The clinic, sponsored by the Tiger Woods Foundation and American Golf, let kids meet one of the world's most charismatic young superstars while giving Woods an opportunity to give back to the community.

"It's really cool when I teach them one by one," Woods said. "If I can teach them to hit that one good shot, it's always nice to see that smile on their faces."

Although the clinics are designed specifically to offer Tiger's golf skills to prospective golfers, Woods added the things he wants to impart are the tools needed off the course.

"What you learn on the golf course, you can use in life," Woods added. "There are choices that kids have to make in life. We're here to tell kids they have a choice in life. Its up to them, its their decision to do what's right."

Throughout the activity, Woods treated each participant with their own specialized training session. And, like the teacher he is during the clinic, he helped each child with posture, position or swing; anything that was lacking.

But, as Floyd will tell you, Woods is no regular golf instructor. With each hand shake (that begins each one-on-one session,) students occasionally forgot how to hit straight, even how to hold the club.

Such was the case for Chandler Williams. Prior to Tiger's approach, Williams easily hit the ball over 200 yards with his driver. After meeting one of his idols, he immediately duffed a ball for about five yards.

"I think I was too excited," laughed Williams, a Detroit native. "I can't see anybody out there that's better than Tiger. It was great, but I was nervous."

But, according to Woods, the gratification is not just in helping a child hit that long drive or perfect lob. Tiger's gratification comes in knowing that he is giving back, and doing what his parents support allows him to do.

Like many of the kids he is trying to reach, Woods said that he too had fallen victim to the pressures of urban life, but through his support system, he overcame it.

"I was lucky to know what right and wrong," said Woods. "Saying no is something these kids are going to have to do. They have a choice, it's their decision. Even if they don't want to play golf, we want to teach that."

While, for many local youth, Tiger's visit was the dream of a lifetime, for local junior golf organizers, it served as validation their efforts are not in vain.

According to TWF officials, these kids have local junior golf directors to thank for meeting Woods. In fact, if not for the efforts of men like Russell Taylor, State Sen. Glenn Howard and Larry Brookins, the TWF would be hard pressed to present its mission to Indy at all.

"We are vitally interested in children," said TWF Executive Director Joseph Grant. "The current generation has a responsibility to have input in a child's life. While we try to lead and inspire, it's the local community that really reaches the youth."

Russell Taylor, director of the Lee Elder Junior Golf Program, said that seeing these kids' dreams fulfilled though his program was all he could ask for.

"Words can't begin to tell how gratifying this is," said Taylor, who was instrumental in getting the TWF to consider Indy as a clinic site. "What these kids are getting out, I am getting twice as much because I know we're helping them."

Currently in its third year, the Lee Elder Junior Golf Program has seen significant growth and is currently one of the largest programs in the nation. The program's annual tour, which is set to start June 14, will give 90 aspiring pros a chance to showcase their young talents.

Other programs, such as the Glenn Howard Junior Golf Program and the Douglass Park program also have seen astronomical growth in the past year.

Additionally, through Woods' visit, funds have been raised and will go to meeting the growing needs of the outstanding programs.

"It's like through the struggling, we know we're doing the right thing," Taylor added. "Hopefully, some of these kids will end up making a living doing this."

Tiger Woods, they may not be, at least not yet. But, with local and national programs continuing the fight to bring them out of the respective plights, Tiger Woods-like, they may become.

Making an Impact

As a former teacher, it's no surprise Lozelle De Luz, Ph.D., helps prepare neighborhood students for college. Although she owns three McDonald's in Wilmington, Delaware, she also finds time to get involved in the community on a state and national level. Lozelle mentors minority student athletes for college and helps to feed the homeless through annual programs she helped establish as External Vice President of the National Black McDonald's Operators Association. Her faith in the potential of every person makes a difference in the lives of everyone Lozelle touches.

Reggie Webb makes a world of difference in people's lives everyday. As President of the National Black McDonald's Operators Association, he helps get minority vendors into the McDonald's system, helping African-American businesses to succeed. Owning five McDonald's in southern California keeps Reggie busy, too; but he's never too busy to help someone else achieve their dream of success.

director of the Lee Elder Junior Golf program and tour reported that their program alone achieved a 35 percent increase this year, and a 250 percent increase the year before.

According to TWF Executive Director Joseph S. Grant, Indianapolis' stellar junior golf efforts were more than enough to warrant a visit.

"That is the basis by which we work with programs," said Grant. "We're merely a catalyst, it's these programs that have to continue when we leave."

Added Tiger, "(Indianapolis) had graciously put out a fabulous resume. We had to come to Indianapolis. It was just a matter of time."

For Woods, the mission of outreach is simple: Give back what he has received. And, although his efforts continually garner funding for each city he visits, like his game, he will never be satisfied.

"The human species is always producing," said Woods. "To the day I die I want to help kids in a positive way. I'm gonna give everything I've got."

During their two-day visit, the foundation conducted a community golf workshop and benefit auction to further its agenda of outreach. The workshop, which was held at Coleman Middle School offered youth and parents a variety of golf related programs, all designed to teach life skills and help kids think about their futures.

According to the Gregory Marshall, TWF director of Junior Golf, the one-of-a-kind workshop and visit helps the TWF take advantage of Woods' marketability and, in turn, reach the community youth where other programs have failed.

"You have this young, charismatic, good-looking guy that looks good in clothes, that kids want to emulate," said Marshall. "But, that's just the puller, Tiger is a role model first. Tiger will tell you golf is just a vehicle. He had a dream, his parents supported it and he's worked hard to achieve it."

"There's nothing better than changing a child's life," said Tiger Woods, who has made it his mission reaching inner city youth through TWF clinics. (Recorder photo by Walt Thomas)

"We feel like these kids will be inspired just by seeing Tiger. Bit by bit, we're trying to make a mark," Marshall added. "We're not trying to solve all the problems over a weekend, but we want to inspire kids to do something. We're trying to reach who we can."

Through the foundation, Tiger and his father Earl Woods continue to quash the many stereotypes that come with the sport. And socially, albeit inadvertent, Tiger's dream to reach kids through the game has caused a fundamental change in the mentality of many minorities to golf. Said Marshall, simply by Tiger being who he is, minorities have that validation that they no longer have to adhere to what stereotypical notions suggest are their sports.

That validation may have been instrumental in Tiger's decision to return to Douglass Park to hold a press conference Monday. Tiger first blessed the once proud African-American golf mecca as an amateur in 1995 when, then a Sullivan Award candidate, he put on an exhibition Douglass golfers still talk about.

Customarily, each TWF press conference is held at the site of the clinic.

"We recognize we're in front from a minority standpoint," Marshall said. "These are brothers in the truest sense of the word who are involved in golf and this tells our people, that's alright."

"Earl Woods is an extraordinary man," he continued. "He's a visionary. He foresaw the impact Tiger would have and he knew he could give back through it."

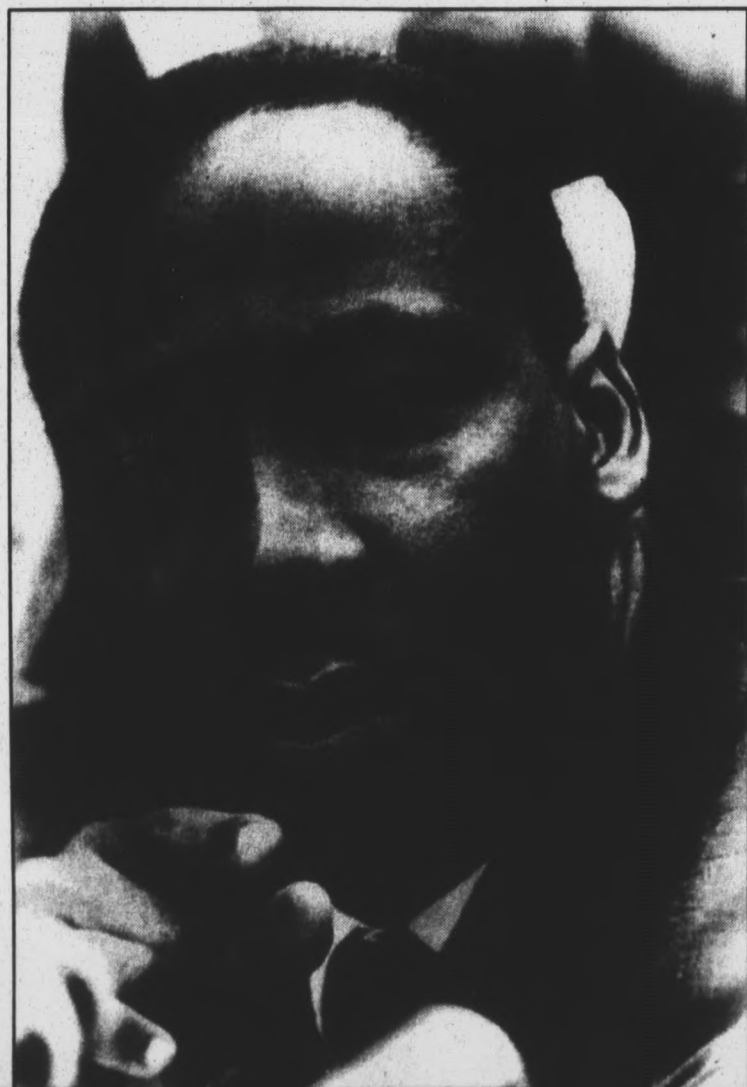

TWF officials added that, even at 23, Tiger understands that, because of his own tenacity, he has become a catalyst for social change. And, for Tiger, carrying that load, along with his own outreach dreams is difficult, but as he showed Sunday when he outlasted Vijay Singh, to win his second straight tournament, it's not in his nature to give up.

"I'm having a great career, but there's never a time I can rest (from outreach)," Woods said. "Sometimes it's great, sometimes it's not. This is a full time job, no matter how old you are, you can never give up."

Sudanese ex-president to meet gov't, rebel officials

KHARTOUM (IPS) - The former military ruler of Sudan, Gaafar Mohamed Nimeiri, has announced plans to hold talks with Sudanese combatants in an attempt to find a peaceful solution to the conflict in the northeast African country, which has claimed more than two million lives over the past 16 years. Nimeiri returned home from exile on May 22 after spending 14 years in Cairo, Egypt.

"I am ready to risk my life because I was the cause of half the problems in the Sudan," he told supporters recently in the capital of Khartoum. "I will contact government officials, opposition leaders and the [Sudan People's Liberation Army] to try to find a peaceful solution to the conflict." - Nhial Bol

Benin teachers will strike until all their demands are met

COTONOU (IPS) - Thousands of primary school teachers in Benin, who have been on strike since mid-March, said they will only return to work after all their demands are met. "We have decided to go on strike until all our demands are met," said Martin Adissa, administrative secretary of Benin's National Union of Primary School Teachers (SNEP-Benin).

According to Adissa, "The new laws adopted by the Beninois government and the country's unions in 1985 which govern the working conditions of teachers provide for 13 separate indemnities for teachers. Until now, we've only gotten three."

The strikers are also demanding that monies withheld from salaries by the government in 1997 in retaliation for an earlier strike be reimbursed. They say the money was illegally withheld, since the country's Constitution of Dec. 11, 1990 guarantees the fundamental right of a worker to engage in strikes.

Demands include raising the monthly allowance for school heads, paying teachers for extra lessons, reinstating the right to organize meetings to discuss the state of the country's education system, and hiring teachers on a permanent basis. - Michee Boko

Army worm invades Somalia's main crop

NAIROBI (IPS) - Army worms, which since last month have devastated parts of East and Central Africa, have now invaded Somalia, worsening the precarious food situation in the Horn of African country.

An assessment report says an outbreak of the African army worm, a serious cereal pest in southern Somalia, threatens the entire crop of the main "Gu" season. This crop is still at a young stage.

The report of the Food Security Assessment Unit (FSAU) of the World Food Program and the Food and Agriculture Organization (FAO) warns of major food shortage in Somalia if the invasion is not stopped.

The worm outbreak was first reported late April in Rwanda and Burundi, followed by Kenya, Uganda and Tanzania. The worms have destroyed thousands of hectares of cereal crop in these countries.

"Should a serious outbreak occur in Somalia, given the absence of a government, there would be no time available for the international community to organize and launch interventions before irreversible damage, potentially of a very large scale, occurs to the 1999 Gu season crop," the FSAU report says. - Judith Achieng'

Traditional healers in Trinidad and Tobago seek recognition

By WESLEY GIBBINGS

PORTO SPAIN (IPS) - Herbal medicine practitioners are clamoring for greater official recognition of their craft, and at least one leading herbalist is calling for new legislation that would decriminalize some current practices.

Researcher Francis Morean said the majority of traditional healers operating in the country are doing so "outside of the law." Many herbal remedies prescribed by practitioners do not have official food and drug regulatory approval. "Traditional healers in Trinidad and Tobago continue to operate in something of a twilight zone and a grey area of political indecisiveness," Morean said. "This, in itself is very ironic when we consider that almost half the population are of Indian descent and the government in India itself is supportive of herbal medicines."

"Then the majority of the other half of the population has ancestors from West Africa where there is great tolerance of traditional healers," he added.

Aromatherapist Nisha Ojar - who is not associated with Morean's campaign - said the use of traditional medicine is gaining in popularity in the country and that there is growing confidence in herbal and other natural remedies. "What I have found as a practitioner is that with aromatherapy it has physical, psychological and spiritual effects," she said. "Aromatherapy is now being acknowledged by people. It is trickling back into the Caribbean."

Ojar said traditional medicine is "never the first choice" in the Caribbean, and that many people use it only to supplement other courses of treatment. The British-trained aromatherapist warned that it is important for practitioners to "know what they are doing," since there are dangers associated with the improper use of herbs and "natural" remedies. "You can do more harm than good if you do not know how to make a proper diagnosis and prescribe the correct remedy," she said.

Morean said he believes herbalists have been practicing their craft with distinction over the years but not with a lot of recognition. "The time has come," he said, "for us to begin to treat our traditional healers as very important persons in our society."

"We continue to ignore these living libraries to our collective peril. This is quite ironic and is also reflective of the ambivalent attitudes towards many aspects of our daily life, especially the environment," he added.

Morean cited the dangers of modern medicine in the treatment of infertility, saying there are too many risks. "There are many safer, cheaper and easily available alternatives which are available right here in Trinidad and Tobago," he said. "These alternatives lie in the wealth of healing herbs which can be found in the nation."

"It is quite easy for orthodox professional health care workers to dismiss such claims as old wives' tales. This attitude, however, does not take into account the fact that thousands of women in this nation have benefited from the healing powers of indigenous herbs."

CELEBRATE JUNETEENTH!

African American Independence Day

What a great day it was on June 19, 1865, when African Americans in Texas learned that they were free although it was two and a half years after President Lincoln's Emancipation Proclamation.

Today, Juneteenth organizers applaud African American achievements, while showing appreciation to all cultures.

As you celebrate Juneteenth, we hope you:

Remember the past,
Honor the present and Make a difference in the community where you live!

National News

March against police brutality held in Kansas City

(NNPA) - The Rev. Ralph Gordon Wright, Kansas City, Mo. activist, invited the national community to join him and other concerned citizens on June 9 in Kansas City for "Enough Is Enough," a march against police brutality and aggression. The march will begin at the city's Washington Square and ended at the police precinct. Local and national leaders were scheduled to speak.

In addition to addressing the national problem of brutality, the event recalled the deaths of those who died in Kansas City from police violence.

Rev. Wright is currently on a hunger strike, and he says he is prepared to remain on one until something is done. "I don't know if I'll ever eat again. I'm that serious about this. Sometimes you have to take drastic measures."

"I'm prayerful for Dick Gregory's guidance, but I will go on regardless," he said.

Congresswoman Clayton introduces agriculture credit bill

(NNPA) - Congresswoman Eva M. Clayton, D-N.C., recently introduced a bill to relieve a debt forgiveness restriction enacted by the 1996 Farm Bill. That law made anyone who had ever received any kind of debt forgiveness ineligible to receive another loan from the United States Department of Agriculture.

The proposed bill, "Agriculture Credit Act of 1998," will allow farmers to remain eligible for USDA loans in three instances: 1. Following a loan consolidation, rescheduling, reamortization, or discharge of a loan; 2. Following a loan write-down due to a financial problem related to a natural disaster or medical condition of the borrower or an immediate family member of the borrower; and 3. Following a loan write-down provided as a part of a resolution of a discrimination complaint against the Secretary of the USDA.

"The changes made in 1996 placed an unfair and unreasonable burden on farmers who must seek help from the USDA," Rep. Clayton said. "This bill will restore fairness and perhaps help to restore the confidence of farmers in the USDA loan programs."

CBC urges FCC to help link underprivileged schools to World Wide Web

(NNPA) - Congresswoman Julia Carson, D-Ind., recently joined with other members of the Congressional Black Caucus in strongly urging the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) to fully fund the E-rate program.

"Every child in America must have the opportunity to log on to the information superhighway," Rep. Carson said. "The E-rate will ensure that even schools with tight budgets will be able to afford the basic telecommunications services needed to link to the Internet."

In response to basic wiring needed by inner city and rural schools to access the Internet, the Telecommunications Act of 1996 included provisions for a discounted "E-rate" to allow schools and libraries to install improved telecommunications infrastructure for Internet links.

The E-rate is financed by changes in existing telecommunication regulatory fees. Under the program, eligible schools and libraries can receive discounts ranging from 20 to 90 percent.

The FCC recently approved $2.25 billion for the E-rate, nearly $1 billion more than the current funding.

Haitian-American community asserts itself in Florida election

By PATRICK SMIKLE

MIAMI (IPS) - In one of his first moves after being formally installed as mayor of North Miami, attorney-at-law Frank Wolland has reached out to the city's Haitian community. "The Haitian community needs to come and participate in our city government by coming to town hall meetings," Wolland told journalists. It was the third time Wolland has openly sought to build bridges with Haitian Americans.

The day after he narrowly defeated Haitian-American businessman Josaphat "Joe" Celestin in the election, Wolland, who is white, went on the Creole speaking radio station. "I will welcome Haitians to the city boards," he said. His reaching-out even extended to Celestin. "I publicly offered him to come to work together with me in the city," he said. The day before the poll Wolland spent three hours on Haitian talk radio.

That appearance had marked a change in Wolland's campaign strategy, which some commentators termed pragmatic. "It is an acknowledgement of the growing political assertiveness of Florida's Haitian community," one observer told IPS.

It is an assertiveness which Guyanese-born political scientist, Ivelaw Griffith, said is born out of socioeconomic necessity. He said Haitians are relatively worse off than other immigrant groups in South Florida. Thus, they feel a compulsion to do something about their situation.

Griffith said Haitian exclusion from immigration relief measures passed by Congress to assist thousands of Nicaraguans, Guatemalans and Salvadorans also prompted them to do something about their situation, he told IPS. "And, one way of doing this is to get representation."

Probably the first concrete sign of this new political assertiveness was in last November's state and municipal elections when six Haitian Americans ran for seats on school boards, the State House of Representatives and the State Senate. While none of these candidates were successful, each got enough votes to attract the attention of the media and of political observers. One of these candidates was Celestin.

It was no surprise when Celestin filed papers to run for Mayor of North Miami. As mayor of this "dormitory city" of 50,000 residents, he would be the most important Haitian American elected official in Florida, indeed the most powerful Caribbean-American politician in the "Sunshine State."

It is estimated that at least 3,000 of this dormitory city's 18,000 registered voters are Haitian Americans. While specifically targeting the Haitian community, using Creole talk radio, Celestin also went after the Black and Hispanic votes, estimated to be about 7,000 and 3,000 respectively.

In polling on May 11, Celestin had received 2,263 votes ahead of Frank Wolland who got 1,623, Anthony Caserta who got 855 and Ted Ravelo who polled only 254 votes. However, having failed to get the 50 percent plus one, needed to become mayor, Celestin was forced into a run-off with Wolland.

Wolland on a new strategy, reaching out to the Haitian community. In the May 18 run-off Wolland won with 3,483 votes to Celestin's 3,045 votes. In the end, Wolland's ability to raise money made the difference, pro-Celestin observers say, noting that Wolland was operating with a campaign fund of $66,000 to Celestin's $4,000.

"I'm disappointed but I still consider the Haitian community winners," said one Haitian-American businessman, "We went to vote by the thousands to bring Joe into office. We did not make it, but we taught city officials a lesson. From now on, whoever leads the city should know the Haitian community is not sleeping. We cannot be neglected."

While the media focussed overwhelmingly on the Celestin/Wolland mayoral contest, another Haitian American, Ossmann Desir, was elected to the five-member Miami city council. Councilman Desir is the only Black member of that body.

Debunking the Black

anti-police myth

By EARL OFARI HUTCHINSON

Many criminal justice experts and community activists said they were surprised at the recent Justice Department survey that found that Blacks in a dozen cities generally applaud the police. There are good reasons for their surprise. Following the Rodney King beating and for a good part of the O.J. Simpson trial much of the press relentlessly played up the police-African American conflict. This planted the dangerous myth that the police and Black communities are perpetually at war.

But African Americans have never been anti-police. They are anti-racist, and anti-abusive police officers. They protest the actions of cops such as New York police officer Justin Volpe who recently pled guilty to the beating and torture of Haitian immigrant Abner Louima. They denounce the conduct of officers who engage in racial profiling of young Black motorists. They condemn those police officers who apply street corner justice in Black communities and those police officials who whitewash their actions through the code of silence.

The handful of rogue cops who disgracefully misuse their authority make a mockery of the laws they are sworn to uphold. Most police officials and beat officers are shamed and embarrassed by their repulsive conduct. They realize that this only deepens the misconception among many African Americans that all cops are brutal.

There's another reason why Blacks have never been anti-police. Despite the mounds of news features and stories that depict young Blacks as thugs, gangsters, and a perpetual menace to whites, most whites aren't at risk from Black criminals. Other Blacks are. They are more likely to be victims of violent crime or to have friends or relatives who have been crime victims than whites. According to the Justice Department survey, Blacks in many cities are nearly twice as likely to be victims of violence than whites. And the leading cause of death among young Black males and increasingly Black females under age 24 is still homicide. In nearly all cases they will be killed by other Blacks, not the police.

The call by many Blacks for more and better police service, increased moral crusades against crime and violence, greater personal and family responsibility, more gang sweeps, injunctions, drug arrests and evictions of lawbreakers from public housing reflect their fervent desire to rid their neighborhoods of drug dealers and violent criminals. This far outweighs any supposed racial loyalties.

A defense attorney with whom I am acquainted found this out the hard way. He told me that he would do anything to get as many Blacks as possible on the jury in a murder case involving his Black client. He reasoned that they were more likely to vote for acquittal. He partly got his wish when a predominantly Black jury was seated. He did not get the other half of his wish. The jury convicted his client and recommended the death penalty.

The biggest reason, however, why many still cling to the erroneous belief that African Americans are anti-police is that they think that most Blacks are poor, downtrodden, and therefore reflexively resentful of established authority. This is another myth. While the total wealth and income of Blacks still pales in comparison to that of whites, the reality is that more African Americans than ever feel they are coming closer to realizing the American Dream. In a 1998 poll the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, the nation's leading Black think tank, found that for the first time ever more Blacks than whites claimed they were better off financially than the year before. This new found sense of prosperity and comfort hardly makes Blacks prone to be cop-hating rebels, but rather conservative law abiding citizens every bit as anxious as whites to safeguard their property and hard earned valuables.

The sad thing is that the false notion that African Americans dislike the police hardens the "us versus them" attitude among many police officers, perpetuates the dangerous cycle of fear, and distrust about the police, and heightens the risk of more destructive confrontations between the police and Black communities. This is far too steep a price to pay for perpetuating a myth.

Will Indianapolis heed the word of Rev. Billy Graham?

Anyone who has lived during the last half of this century has been influenced by the evangelism of the Rev. Dr. Billy Graham. For nearly 60 years, Graham has visited nearly every country on earth, preaching God's Word.

Graham's evangelism style comes from Billy Sunday, who during the 1920s and 30s barnstormed the nation, a John the Baptist in a suit, preaching the Gospel in tents, open fields and city auditoriums.

Graham's evangelism also built upon techniques developed by Catholic Bishop Fulton J. Sheen, who in the early 1950s demonstrated the power of the mass media to preach the Word to millions.

Rev. Billy Graham was the first to combine traveling evangelism with the tools of modern media and communications. His success created scores of televangelists, some of whom brought scandal to their ministries. But Graham's ministry, the biggest and most successful, has been free of ethical, sexual and financial scandal.

Rev. Graham's visit to Indianapolis brought back personal memories of my youth when my family and I would listen to his Sunday radio broadcasts. Those broadcasts are etched in my memory. The rich baritone voice of George Beverly Shea singing "How Great Thou Art." The soothing narration of Cliff Barrows. The simple, precise message of God's love and faith delivered by Rev. Graham.

The first outdoor event or con-

Just Tellin' It

By AMOS BROWN

cert I ever attended was a Billy Graham Crusade in Chicago's Soldier Field in the early 1960s. In that massive stadium, I was part of nearly 100,000 people, seeing in person what I'd heard on radio.

Through binoculars, I saw Rev. Graham preach his message. And that image of thousands streaming from every corner of Soldier Field to the turf rededicating their lives to Christ as the mass choir sang "Just As I Am," is an image ingrained in my memory and soul.

Those memories were re-kindled last Thursday attending the opening night of Rev. Graham's Indianapolis Crusade in the RCA Dome.

Unlike other evangelists whose crusades are more TV show or rock concert than church service, Billy Graham's Indianapolis crusade was an exercise in simplicity. A service mixing the traditional old favorites and popular celebrities to tell a message of God's faithfulness and Jesus' love.

Cliff Barrows, now 76, kept the two-hour service moving briskly as the MC and director of a 4,000 voice mass choir. There was the flashy Dallas Cowboy, Deion Sanders, delivering a powerful testimony that sex, money and power doesn't bring you peace, only Jesus.

George Beverly Shea, now 90, one of the most gifted gospel singers in history, brought the Dome to a hushed quiet with his powerful, understated rendition of "The Old Rugged Cross."

Finally, greeted by enthusiastic applause, punctuated by the slow, steady staccato of flash bulbs as hundreds captured a Kodak moment, Billy Graham came to the podium. Despite his age (80) and the onset of Parkinson's disease, Rev. Graham stood on his feet for 40 minutes and preached the simple message of the Gospel.

In his message, Billy Graham managed to weave Genesis 1:1, John 3:16-17, Star Wars, the ills of modern society and the Columbine tragedy into a message on the evils of sin, disobeying the Ten Commandments, and straying from the Bible's teaching and the words of Jesus Christ. Graham's sermon expressed God's love for man, and that eternal peace awaits if we repent of our sins and express our faith in Christ's teachings.

Surprising some of his critics in the Black community, Dr. Graham specifically mentioned the evils of racism in Indianapolis. Earlier in the week, at a press conference, Rev. Graham specifically mentioned the undercurrent of racial tension and divisiveness in Indianapolis. "Racism can't be stopped by laws," Graham declared, "it must be stopped in the heart."

He received strong applause from the 50,000 in the Dome when he declared, "One thing I want to come out of this crusade in Indianapolis is that we must do all we can to start a new relationship between the races."

Graham hopes his crusades help change the spiritual soul of a community. Success isn't measured by how many tears streamed as the choir sang "Just As I Am," answering Graham's call to Christ. Success is whether individuals hearts in Indianapolis will be changed.

Among those in the Dome opening night were Gov. O'Bannon, Mayor Goldsmith, Secretary of State Sue Ann Gilroy, Speaker of the Indiana House John Gregg, State Democratic Chair Robin Winston and numerous legislators, councilpersons, business, civic and media executives, including StarNews Executive Editor Frank Caperton. Will they, along with everyone else in attendance, heed Rev. Graham's message?

Those political, business and media leaders attending Graham's opening crusade heard Rev. Graham specifically say "there's still a lot of racist feelings, down below the surface in Indianapolis." What will they do to erase those racist feelings?

After Rev. Graham leaves, will our community leaders continue their war against the homeless? Will they continue building a downtown just for yuppies and the rich, rooting out working people, Blacks and senior citizens?

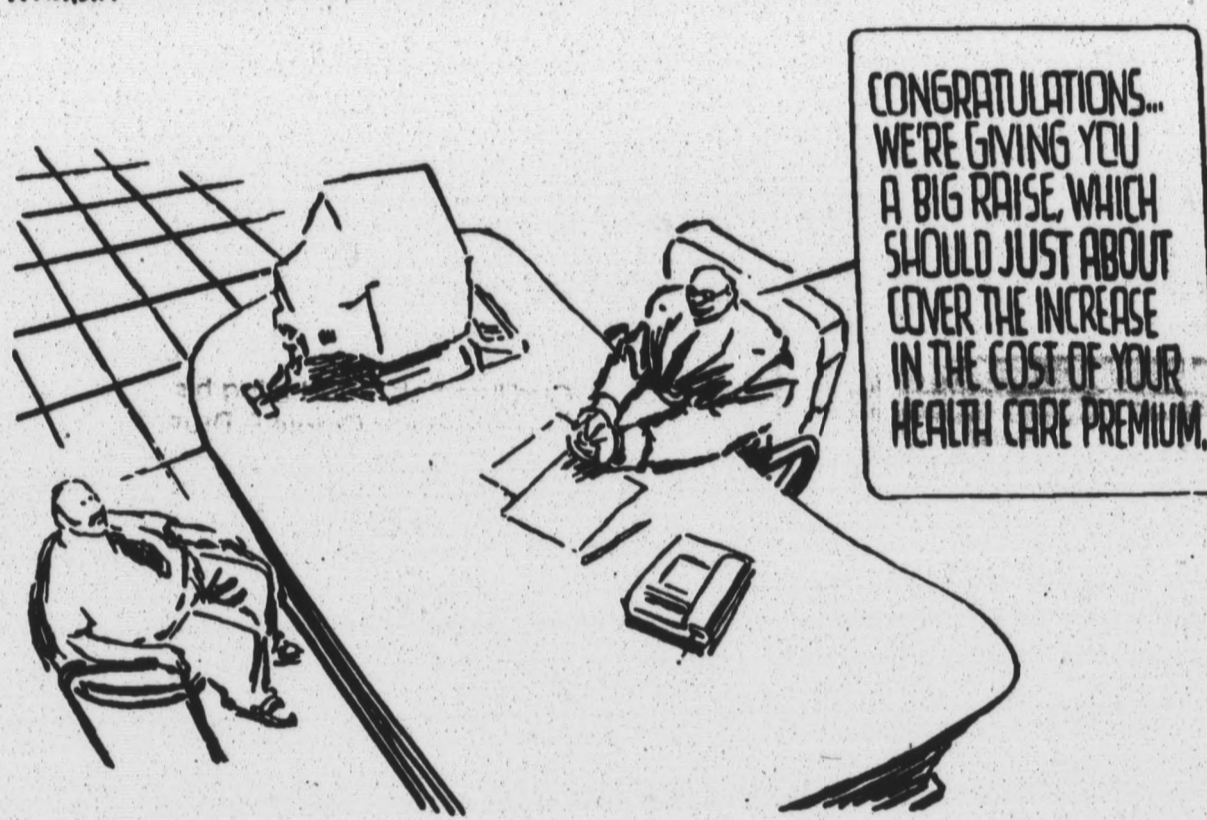

Will those media executives, who attended Rev. Graham's crusade, continue implementing policies that exclude African Americans from decision-making positions? Will those business and civic executives attending the crusade continue maintaining rigid racial glass ceilings preventing Blacks from progressing in media, business and industry?

Will those leaders who heard Rev. Graham's message continue to give priority to buildings over people, sports over schools, those with over those without?

It was great that God called Billy Graham to come here to preach and inspire. Let's hope Graham's message opens the hardened hearts of those in Indianapolis who are determined to keep African Americans, homeless, working class and senior citizens down and out on the eve of the Millennium.

See 'ya next week!

Affirmative action: Meeting America's social problems

I applaud the University of Michigan for defending its affirmative action admissions policy with a straightforward declaration that a diverse student body ensures that everyone will get a better education.

Michigan officials don't apologize for using a system under which an applicant gets 20 points for being Black or Hispanic - or more than the 12 points given to an applicant who scores a perfect 1600 on the standardized SAT. They say that high-school grades are far more important than the SAT in predicting success in college and life, thus they give 40 points for high-school grades.

The university is defending itself against two lawsuits charging blatant discrimination against whites with the argument that it has deliberately created a student body that is 25 percent minorities because an abundance of statistical evidence shows that students who are exposed to a diverse student body make better and more productive citizens. And the university cites the assertion of the late Supreme Court Justice Lewis F. Powell Jr., that to promote the "robust exchange of ideas" that might flow from a racially diverse student body, colleges and universities could give some weight to an applicant's race.

Those arguments once seemed unassailable, legally and morally, but in today's climate, in which the foes of affirmative action have virtually made diversity a four-letter word, one has to wonder if they can pass muster in a U.S. District Court in Michigan or the Sixth Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati, where these cases seem certain to go.

A white person denied admission to a university, or a professional school, these days is quick to claim "reverse discrimination" if he or she can cite an SAT score or some measurement of qualifications in which he or she appears to be superior to some minority person who was admitted. The white complainant's lawyers argue fervently that no claim of social benefits ought to outweigh the claim that the white applicant was denied the Constitution-guaranteed "equal protection of the laws."

The current U.S. Supreme Court has held that any hiring or admissions policy that involves consideration of race must be given "strict scrutiny" - with a presumption that it is unconstitutional. This conservative high tribunal has abandoned completely the philosophy of former Justice Harry A. Blackmun that "in order to get beyond race we must first consider race."

Michigan is saying what many other prominent educators have said: that affirmative action produced educational opportunities that created a proud Black middle class in America; that it created a better-educated and more civilized group of white graduates; and it is essential today if we are to meet the challenges of America's most troublesome social problem - racial and ethnic confront.

The question is whether blind legalisms and phony pretenses, or judicial wisdom tempered with a sense of justice, will prevail once the court arguments are over in the University of Michigan case.

Christian schools take skills, fellowship to track

By BARATO BRITT
Staff Writer

Last week, kids from local Christian schools were finally able to showcase their athletic skills in a competitive arena.

The first annual Zion Hope Christian School Track and Field invitational opened competition for three teams from city schools in several events, marking the first time kids from such schools were able to participate in interschool athletic activities.

The event, which took place at Arlington High School, saw over 190 first through fifth grade students from Zion Hope, Jewell Christian Academy and True Belief Academy, vying for the title of track champions. And, for event organizer Rosalyn Shepherd, the fun was not just in the competition, but in the fellowship.

"We have a lot of talent here," said Shepherd, also with Zion Hope Academy. "A lot of times, they don't get a chance to show it. These kids are ecstatic about having the opportunity to do this. But here, it's not about winning or losing. This is just Christians having fun."

Since the meet was the first ever for the students, the invitational worked also as an introduction to the sport. During the meet, instructors took time to teach each child the competition positions and races: the 50, 100 and 200 meters, the four-by 100-meter relay, shotput and the long jump.

Additionally, to remind the children they were in a faith-based competition, the schools rallied together to conduct a circle of prayer.

"Our main goal was not to go out and blow each other out," Shepherd added. "Everyone out there supported each other. It wasn't a rivalry thing, when we got on that track, we were all as one."

In keeping with the invitational's themes of sport through Christian fellowship, the invitational 100-plus volunteers, most of whom were parents, made the first-ever event on for the books. According to Shepherd, the parental involvement made the schools' jobs of teaching track skills easier.

"It takes a whole lot for 180 children to be out there," she said. "We believe in having things organized. Parents have been like 'what do you need me to do,' since we started it. 'They were willing to try something new.'"

Only a week removed from the first event, a smashing success according to organizers and parents, three other school have signed on as competitors for the next games. And, while True Belief Academy walked away with the title of Christians schools' most athletic, gaining the first place prize is not really the true goal of the invitation. For organizers of this unique excursion, walking away filled with Christian values is the true prize. And, for that reason, each school walked away victorious.

Whitney Houston's hits are low blows

Whitney Houston, without question possesses a supreme singing voice, but her techniques for communicating with her spouse are the pits. This concerns me. According to a recent article in Redbook magazine, Houston told the world that she is the violent partner in her marriage - not her husband. She said, "Contrary to belief, I do the hitting, he doesn't. He has never put his hands on me. He is not a woman beater."

It's startling enough when a batterer announces their need to hurt and harm, but it is even more alarming when she/he attempts to justify their violence. This is exactly what Houston did. In the same article she went on to defend the violence in their marriage. "We are crazy for one another. I mean crazy in love. When we're fighting, it's like that's love for us. We are fighting for our love."

Readers take careful notes. Crazy, violent, fighting love is not love.

It is unhealthy, and perverted addiction to drama, pain and confusion. The type of love presented by Whitney Houston and Bobby Brown is not to be emulated but eradicated. The glitz of this high profile couple could cause a number of foolish lovers to follow them down the road to black eyes and broken ribs.

The best road map for healthy relationships is the word of God. In Colossians 3:8 we learn very valuable lessons. "But now put them all away: anger, wrath, malice, slander and foul talk from your mouth, do not lie to each other, seeing that you have put off the old nature with its practices and put on the new nature."

This means that husbands and wives don't have to live in war zones.

There is a better way than the Houston method of slugging it out for love.

Prescription

I wonder about women who hit the men they love. Why do they do it? Do they fit in the same aggressive, controlling motif of men who are batterers? Do their men drive them to it? Is there a shelter for men who are abused by their women? I even tried to visualize Houston slapping Brown. Something just did not add up. So I called, Larry Washington, a domestic violence counselor. He is an articulate voice in the area of African Americans who find themselves caught up in the hitting habit.

Washington stated the segment of women who are batterers is very small. "Most women who retaliate with violence do so because they have been abused," he explained. "Generally the men in their lives have emotionally abused them. Emotional abuse is the worst because the scars rarely heal," Washington said.

"These women don't fit the pattern of typical power and control of male batterers," he continued. "Their violence can be triggered by past events in their lives where someone hurt them. Usually they are doing so out of self-defense. I've talked to women who were

Financial planning for the community

By A.L.A.
Recorder Correspondent

A "1999 Financial Planning Seminar" is scheduled from 10 a.m. to 12 p.m., June 26, at Martindale Church of Christ, 2402 Dr. Andrew J. Brown.

The seminar, entitled "Family & Money," is designed to be interactive with plenty of member participation. Topics include: family values; what is a good steward; how to become a good steward; setting goals; budgeting and planning; investing for the future; how to overcome financial bondage; and wills & estate planning. Seminar presenter is Aleta Hodge, president of Money Counsel, Inc., a fee-based financial planning firm here in Indianapolis.

"The whole program is about education and motivation, and making people more confident about money matters," Hodge said. "It also teaches them to become better consumers and investors. I was working in the corporate and investment arena when people began asking me questions about how to manage their own money. So I did a lot of research and decided to start my own planning business. My desire is to help people and see them improve their lives."

Hodge enjoys a very impressive background. She received an MBA in finance from Indiana University and a bachelor of science degree in environmental science from Stanford University. She created the "Women & Money" program to empower women financially. This program is based on her book, "Women & Money Common Sense

Aleta Hodge

Handbook," second edition.

Hodge taught Personal Finance at Indiana University-Purdue University at Indianapolis. She also taught classes on entrepreneurship and managerial finance. She has traveled as far as Singapore to present her paper on "International Marketing Approach for Women and Small Business Owners" at the World Conference on Entrepreneurship and Innovative Change.

Recipient of the Continental Who's Who award and the Outstanding Young Women of America Award, Hodge has served on numerous non-profit organization boards.

Coordinators for the seminar are Nikki and William Woodson, members of the Martindale Church of Christ. Clara Reid also has worked closely with them to make the event a success.

University UMC honors Hutchinson

Recently, over 200 friends, family and members of University United Methodist Church gathered at the Crystal Yacht Club to celebrate with Rev. and Mrs. Charles L. Hutchinson on his retirement. Special guest speakers for the celebration were Bishop Woodie White and South Indiana Conference UMC District Superintendent Larry Curtis. Hutchinson, an instrumental cog in the civil rights movement, has been equally effective since his tenure in Indiana, bringing several race relations initiatives and programs to the Indiana Conference. And, even in retirement, Hutchinson will continue his volunteer efforts.

Arrows in the hands of a warrior

Psalm 127:3-5

Lo, children are an heritage of the Lord: and the fruit of the womb is his reward. As arrows are in the hand of a mighty man; so are children of the youth.

Happy is the man that hath his quiver full of them: they shall not be ashamed, but they shall speak with the enemies in the gate.

What is the real message of Littleton, Colo.; Paducah, Ky.; Pearl, Miss.; Springfield, Ore.; and Conyers, Ga? It was delivered in blizzard, bold face letters and still we don't get it. We talk about guns, media, drugs, schools as if they were the cause. I think not. They are definitely influences, but the cause is so unsettling and personal that we can hardly face it, and so we blame others and things we cannot control while we rationalize and justify what we can control: The home!

I believe that the cause of the chaos has more to do with raising children than children raising hell; more to do with parenting than with pointing fingers. And before we become too defensive, the fact is that all of us contribute to the chaos by our apathy if nothing else. It is time for each one of us to shoulder the responsibility instead of placing the blame. It is the breakdown in families, communities, schools and media and they are all inextricably bound to each other and have contributed to a coarsening of our civilization and the sabotaging of our society. With no morals or manners; no rules or respect, we are hurdling down a corridor of chaos bound for a head on collision with a culture we have created a vicious and violent conscienceless culture where life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness are not worth a dime.

The psalmist understood that the problem was more than a blame game. It is a fundamental misunderstanding of the unique purpose of our children's generation. Every parent must believe that God wants to use his or her child in a special way.

In God's eyes, children are instruments or arrows in the hands of parents or warriors (we are in constant battle/warfare) against our enemy, Satan. A young straight, sharp arrow is a tremendous threat to the enemy. We are the arrow makers and they are the arrows. And if we do our job, we can take back what the enemy stole. He has already stolen one generation, and he is trying for the second. There has never been a nation to survive the loss of two successive generations.

We are not merely to have children but to help or fashion them to be arrows that will defeat Satan.

Muslims: People of faith

It is impossible to be a Muslim and not be a person of great faith. Very similar to the belief systems practiced in the Christian and Jewish faiths, a Muslim must be a believer that believes - based on faith.

Faith in Al-Islam, as in some other religions, is not without substance or foundation. The faith of a Muslim is a rationally based faith as that of the great patriarch Abraham. G-d had patience with Abraham's inquiring mind.

In the holy Qur'an (Koran), Abraham asks of G-d, "My Lord! Show me how Thou givest life to the dead." G-d replied to Abraham, "Do you not then believe?" Abraham answered in the affirmative, "Yes!" and he continued, "but to satisfy my own understanding (heart)." G-d, through this example, recognized and answered Abraham's inquiring mind.

In Al-Islam Abraham is seen as a man of strong conviction with an unyielding faith even in face of being expelled from his father's home. Yet even with his strong faith Abraham did not feel complete until G-d gave him understanding of his question.

This is the faith of the Muslim. The type of faith needed by all believers in the world today. It is this type of rationally based faith that affords believers in G-d, (Muslims, Christians, Jews, and others) to progress as free thinkers.

G-d says in the holy Qur'an, "Think! For surely thinking benefits the thinker. And the greatest thinking of all is thinking about G-d." G-d wants us to think, reflect, and ponder. G-d is the One who intentionally gave us curious minds to advance us as people of faith.

Often some quote the old saying "Curiosity killed the cat." But very few finish this old saying that concludes saying, "but satisfaction brought it back." The satisfaction that brings a curious mind back to life is understanding. Christ Jesus, prayers and peace be on him, is reported as saying, "My people

Al-Islam in America
By INAM
MIKAL SAAHIR

suffer from a lack of understanding."

Wicked minded people are in competition against believers for the minds and souls of our youth. It is imperative, that as we plant the seed of faith in the hearts and minds of our children, that we simultaneously plant the seeds that produce independent thinkers.

G-d created a powerful intellect when He created the human mind. G-d created the human intellect and the human soul to serve Him, and Him alone. As people of faith if we can accept that the both of these two tools, our mind and soul, are to function in agreement as one unit, then our rational based faith can free us from oppression. This is what our youth need to hear and understand.

Muslims must be a people of faith. The type of faith that begins with belief in G-d as being One G-d with no partners or associates. G-d revealed to humanity in the holy Qur'an: Chapter 4; verse 136: "O you who believe! Believe in G-d and His Messenger (Muhammed), and the scripture which He has revealed unto His Messenger, and the scripture which He revealed aforetime. Whoso disbelieves in G-d, and His angels, and His scriptures, and His Messengers and the Last Day, he verily has wandered far astray."

imprisoned due to such violence, and I asked them, "why did you stab him, why did you shoot him, why did you cut him?" Their answers were the same. They were defending themselves. However, regardless of the reasons, they were wrong.

"Well, what about Whitney Houston," I asked. "What do you think causes her to beat her husband?"

Washington speculated, "With Houston, perhaps her spouse has been cheating on her, and she tried to make him accountable." I believe Washington is correct. A sister will try to make her man accountable for what he has done wrong - be it coming home late, or seeing other women on the side. Houston's hubby has created a trail of babies, binges and broken laws across the nation. Maybe she hits him to make him shape up.

Maybe she hits him because somewhere in her past violence was the preferred communication tool. Whatever her reasons, they are wrong. It is never right to hurt or harm.

If this scenario describes you or your loved one, seek counseling now. Before it is too late.

SALT

An army/generation of children will be mighty in the land when parents see themselves as warriors preparing the next generation to take back what the enemy has stolen.

Parenting requires purpose, preparation, and promise.

I have included the "Parent's Take Charge Covenant" from "Stop the Funerals Save Our Children" meeting. It is simple, but what a difference it would make if we took the pledge. Let's stop talking about what we can't do and start talking about what we can do!

Parent's, Take Charge Covenant

Daily, I will pray with my children at home so they can take prayer in their hearts to school.

Daily, I will monitor television and Nintendo to see what they are watching and then limit the amount of time.

Daily, I will talk with my children and the children I know, and listen to the issues they think are

Rekindling the spirits — Celebrating diversity

The Baha'is of Indianapolis invites the community to experience uplifting music, dance, drama and fellowship at the Watkins Family Center, 2360 Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. St., on June 18 - 20. The programs on Friday and Saturday nights will start with a potluck at 6:00 p.m. and performances at 7:00 p.m., and the program on Sunday will start with a potluck lunch at 11:30 a.m. with a performance at 12:30 p.m. The events are free and open to the general public.

Each program will offer diversity in expression and food for thought.

"Re-Generation," an interracial performance group whose members are from Colorado, California and Arizona, will perform "Soul Searching", an intimate and captivating dramatic and musical piece which explores race relations past and present in an effort to inspire a profoundly transformative future.

Dramatist, Ladjamaya, will also perform "The Black Experience - A Cry for World Peace". Ladjamaya creates a unique and powerful dramatic experience through a collage of poetry, prose, drama and song depicting the African American experience from slavery and emphasizing the need for racial unity as a prerequisite for world peace.

The "Indiana Dawnbreakers" Baha'i youth workshop will be performing at the events to share their vision of hope and unity for today's troubled world. These dedicated young men and women, ages 11 - 20, are committed to expressing principles of world peace as taught by the Baha'i Faith through drama, dance, and rap.

For more information, call the Indianapolis Baha'i Community, 925-5903.

HODGE

"It's something we have wanted to do for the church for a long time," William Woodson said. "Our church is growing and so is the membership, so we thought it would be beneficial for them to get involved in the financial seminar. It was originally an idea just for our church, but because of the response we decided to open it up to the entire community. This is a chance for people to get financial influence from a Christian perspective."

"I would like to see people get down-to-earth understanding about their finances, and Ms. Hodge comes highly recommended as a Christian who would be able to give a good seminar from a family and Christian perspective," added Woodson.

Those interested in attending can register by calling Woodson at 926-5303. The cost of the seminar is $10, which includes a box lunch. A planning book can be purchased for an additional $18. Early registrants will receive choice of seating and free coffee and donuts. There will also be free balloons and prizes.

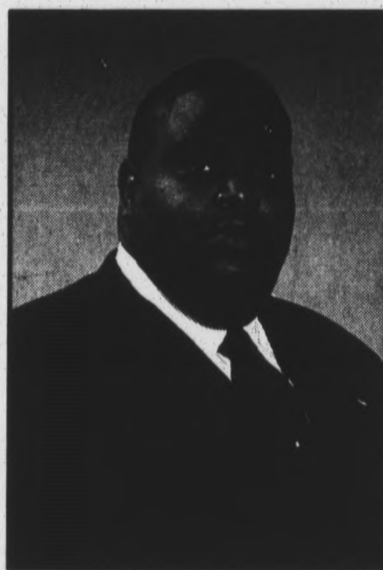

Woodson said not only would the seminar benefit him and his wife, who are newlyweds, to plan for a family in the future, but will even benefit those who already have a family to better maintain it financially.

New Bethel Baptist holds Women's Day

The WORD for the Week

Promises, promises

What is the real essence of marriage? First of all, you should not equate marriage with sexual relations. On one side, the Bible condemns all sexual relations outside of marriage as sin. On the other side, God blesses the honeymoon union as holy. Why? Because the couple is already married. Marriage is not the same as sexual relations. Marriage authorizes sexual relations.

What then is marriage? Speaking to a husband, God says of his wife, "She is your companion and your wife by covenant" (Malachi 2:14). In other words, marriage is a covenant. Not only so, in marriage you make a covenant. You take vows before God. You make promises. You say, "I do promise and covenant before God and these witnesses to be your loving husband or wife in sickness and in health, in plenty and in want, in joy and in sorrow, as long as we both shall live."

Yes, when you married, you promised to be a companion to your husband or wife as long as you both should live. You promised to be by his or her side so that he or she would never be lonely, never be without encouragement, never be without help, never be without someone to talk to.

A lot of people are breaking their promises these days. How about you? Are you keeping your marriage promises?

Shirley Caesar honored

By MARGARET MANSFIELD

High honors goes to Gospel great Shirley Caesar, who is among 13 artists recently honored this year as National Heritage Fellows. The group of honorees was chosen by the National Endowment for the Arts. The prestigious honor is given to artists who have "dedicated their lives to preserving, reviving and celebrating this country's living cultural heritage." Caesar was presented with the award on May 27 during a ceremony at the White House.

Andrea Girton

Andrea Girton, daughter of Reverend John E. and Ann Girton, Sr. will attend Indiana State University this fall and major in music education and music business.

A graduate of North Central High School, Andrea maintained a 3.36 GPA for four years while participating in the African American Scholars Program, Allegros Descants, and Counterpoints. For three years she participated in the Northernaires Choir and was the organization secretary for the 1998-1999 school term. She also received the Benjamin E. Mays award, Academic Excellence award, Performing Arts Letter, U. S. Achievement Academy National award, and many Indiana State School Music Association awards.

Andrea is an active member of the Loving Missionary Baptist Church where her Father is pastor. Her mother, Ann Girton, is a financial accountant for Guardian Royal Exchange Insurance Group. Andrea's sister, Ledrena Girton, is a certified nursing assistant for one of Indianapolis' Home Health Centers and her brother and sister-in-law, Minister John and LaWanda Girton own and operate Mass Media; a Marketing, Advertising and Public Relations consulting firm in Nashville, Tennessee.

"Andrea has been a good role model and has made a significant impact on her peers," her Mother says. "She will make a tremendous contribution wherever she goes and with whatever she does."

Classes will begin on June 21 at various locations throughout the city, including IPS Day Adult High School, 1500 E. Michigan St., Emmerich Manual Evening School, 2405 S. Madison Ave.,

Year-round schools: pro and con

There has been a lot of discussion for and against year-around-school. This type of school calendar consists of students attending classes 3-weeks on and 2-weeks off, throughout the entire year. And a few more weeks off during the summer months. The entire community should support year-around-education.

But does it have to come in the form of the public education system? Summer time is upon us and there will be plenty of "free" time available for educational purposes. How many families will spend the summer developing their children's academic skills?

Each day we are bombarded with information about summer activities offered through the YMCA, Boys & Girls Club, schools, neighborhood organizations, and a host of other agencies. Most of them are doing a very good job of keeping the children active. However, very few activities that are offered through out the summer months focus on academics. The education and academic process should be an all-year-around endeavor. The school system does not have to offer this type of learning for it to take place. Parents should see to it that their child is being academically challenge, even outside of the structured public education.

The I-STEP testing takes place about a month into the new school year (September or October). The public school students are not scoring well under this new testing system. If we continue with the traditional 9-month system, parents must find academically challenging activities for their children to participate in. Going to the public library, museums, joining book clubs, playing educational computer games, or simply buying a variety of educational workbooks are a few ways to keep your child engaged in the academic process.

If you know of a summer program that stresses academics and you want to share it with our readers, please write me at:

Pike freshman Allissa Moore is certain to be one of the favorites during her high school career as she continues solid showings in the 400 and 4 X 400.

Moore stepping into her own on track

By JAMES M. KEOUGH JR.
Sports Writer

Pike High School's Allissa Moore always seems to be following in the footsteps of North Central's Erica Barnett. In fact, she is usually riding her heels. Not unusual for a freshman who is trying to adjust to life at the next level.

However, what makes this situation a bit out of the norm is that Barnett, a senior, is the top girls 400 meter runner in the county and Moore has been right on her heels. Not bad for a kid who should emerge as the top 400 meter runner in the county for the next three years.

As a freshman, Moore earned an opportunity to compete in the state tournament last weekend at IUPUI. She earned an eighth-place finish and recorded her best time of the year in any heat of the 400 meters. The Pike 4 X 400 relay team finished second in the state and Moore's time of 57.9 was her best this season.

Moore exceeded her own expectations. "I kept getting 60 flat all year. I would get this time at every single meet. I think the weather, the track and the big adrenaline rush were factors that helped me improve my time. I even surprised myself this time. I was shocked that I finished under 60," said Moore, who carries a B average. "I feel honored and blessed that God has given me the gift to compete. I am very fortunate," added Moore.

Three second place finishes. She finished second in the county, sectional and regional meets in the 400 meters. She finished behind Barnett all three times. It is clear that Barnett and Moore are the two best in the county. And next year Moore is the heir apparent to the county throne.

"My goal is to place higher in the state next year in the 400 meters and win the four by four hundred relay," said Moore. "Honestly, I wasn't expecting to get this far this year. I wanted to run this season and place at least once. I never expected this. I just wanted to run."

Moore started competing while in the sixth grade at New Augusta Public Academy. She said that she really started taking the competition seriously in the seventh grade. Prior to the seventh grade, running was just something she enjoyed doing.

Gifted? According to Moore, she puts in the effort and work that it takes to be successful. "I have to work really hard for what I have. I probably have a small gift, but I try to work hard to develop it every day," added Moore.

Real Pacers arrive, regain home court

By JAMES M. KEOUGH JR.
Sports Writer

What more could the Indiana Pacers ask for?

After competing with the Miami Heat and Orlando Magic for supremacy in the Eastern Conference of the National Basketball Association for most of the regular season, the Pacers were pitted against the eighth-seeded New York Knicks in the Eastern Conference Finals.

With Miami, Orlando and the Atlanta Hawks out of the way, one might figure the Pacers were almost a lock on its first trip to the Finals.

Well, think again.

The New York Knicks have established themselves as one of the most tenacious, aggressive teams in the NBA. This is particularly true in the playoffs.

Just ask Miami and Atlanta.

It would seem improbable that the Pacers would underestimate the rough n' tough, high-powered Knicks.

Would they?

Or did the layoff the Pacers labored through after sweeping the Philadelphia 76ers disorient them to the point where they could lose their playoff focus?

Whatever the reason, the Indiana Pacers did not show up for games one and two. They played well in game three but Knicks forward Larry Johnson made a miraculous four point play in the closing seconds of the game to give the Knicks an improbable victory.

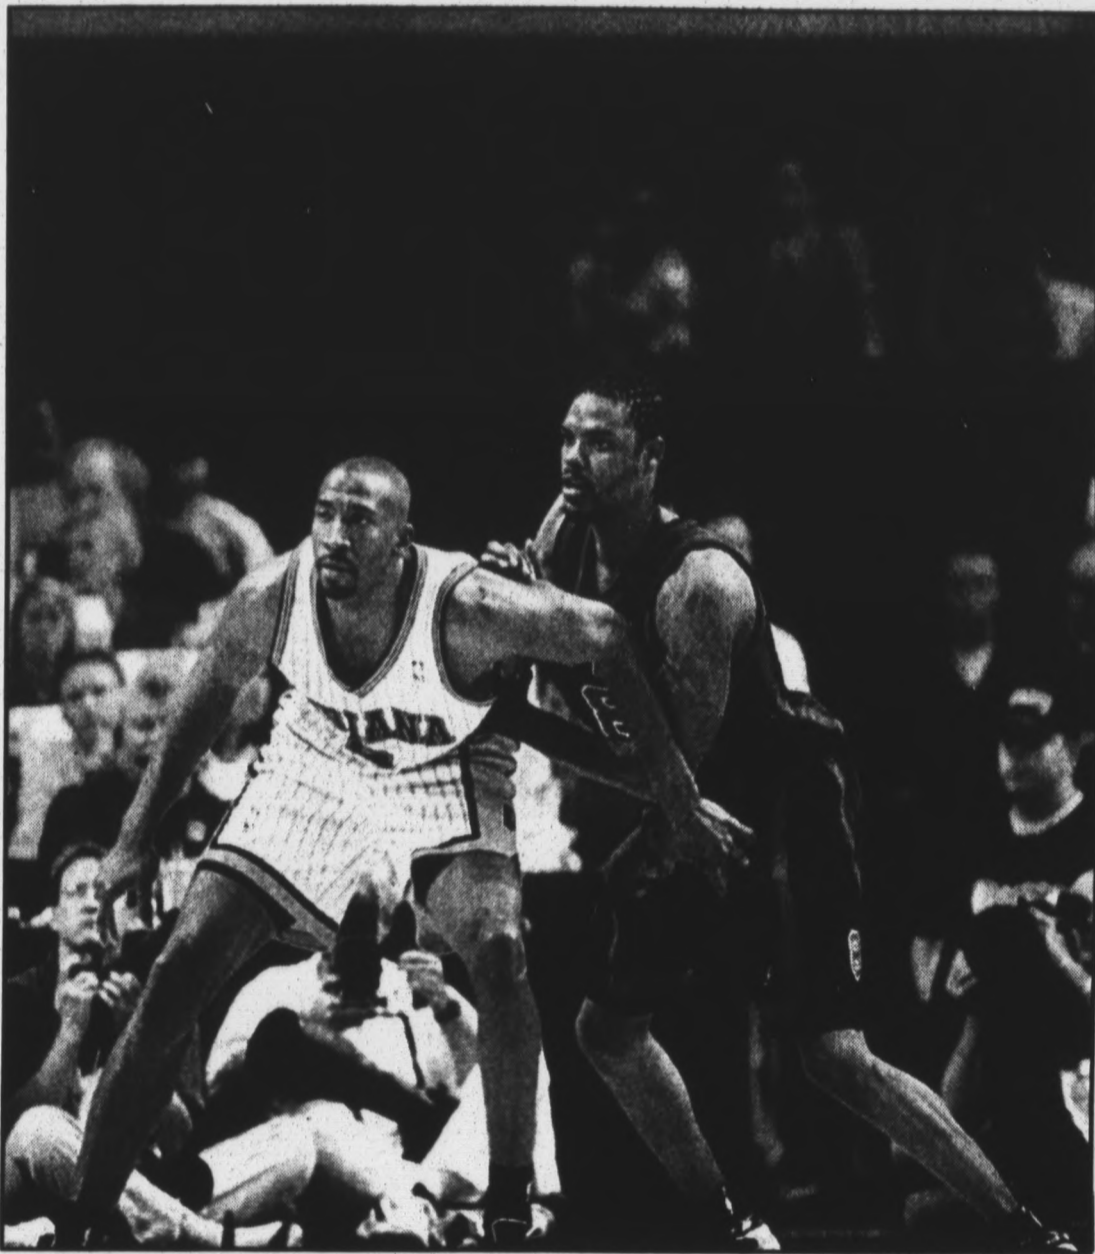

The real Pacers finally arrived in game four and reclaimed home-court advantage.

It would appear that the Knicks are fresh out of gimmicks, emotional charges due to fallen leaders and ultimately, time. If the Pacers focus on the fundamentals, the Knicks should now become a minor road bump on the way to the NBA Finals.

Additionally, the leaders of this team will have to come up big.

For the Pacers, the fundamentals include transition defense, rebounding and ball movement.

"We have to hit some shots, play well on the defensive end and rebound," said Pacers head coach Larry Bird. "I'm not worried about Reggie Miller. He'll get it going. There is no question about it. Overall, we are playing pretty well right now."

Pacers forward Derrick McKey said even during some of the low points of the series, the Pacers have collectively remained confident in their ability to advance.

"Through all of this we have remained confident. Even after we lost the first game at home and then the first game in New York, guys have remained confident that we can get the job done," said McKey, who continues to play solid defense on a variety of New York players.

"They are going to come out (on Friday) and play with a lot of energy and a lot of force. They are going to try to do all of the little things they have done to get the wins they have gotten," added McKey.

"We just have to stay focused and concentrate on the things we want to stop them from doing. We have to keep (Marcus) Camby off the boards, contain LJ (Larry Johnson) and obviously try to contain (Latrell) Sprewell." Enough said. Stay tuned.

Gus Macker roars through Fort Harrison

Last week, the annual Gus Macker Basketball Tournament roared through Indy, giving hoop hopefuls a chance to be named Top Mens and Top Womens players in the city. And, while the thrill and feel of the annual tournament return, the Macker itself was moved to fit its growing tradition.

For the first time in its 12-year history, the Indianapolis Gus Macker 3-on-3 Basketball Tournament was held at Fort Benjamin Harrison, providing organizers and players more open space for the round robin tournament.

Along with a new venue came new events, such as the Pepsi Skill City, an area which contained basketball accuracy drills and offered skills challenges for competitors of all ages.

"We are delighted to host such a great event here at Historic Fort Harrison," said Tom Couch, project development manager of the Fort Harrison Reuse Authority. "Recreation is one of the cornerstones of the new Lawrence City Center being constructed at the former Fort Benjamin Harrison."

Harris/ Workman game a success

The 3rd Annual Amp Harris/Haywoode Workman Saving Our Youth Celebrity Basketball Game was again a smashing success for the community and it's youth as the game let community kids interact with national celebrities and local dignitaries. The event also raised funds for local outreach efforts.

WNBA 'Got next' in Indy

City picked as site for WNBA expansion team
By JAMES M. KEOUGH JR.
Sports Writer

When the Women's National Basketball Association kicked off its inaugural season in the summer of 1997, its slogan was "We Got Next."

Due to the fact that the WNBA season begins on the heels of the NBA playoffs and this is the playground term for a challenger waiting for a turn to compete, this catchy phrase was fitting for the upstart league.

Well, now Indianapolis, Miami, Portland and Seattle "Got Next" due to these cities being announced by the WNBA as expansion cities for the 2000-2001 season.

Consistent with how other WNBA teams are managed, the new teams will be managed by the NBA front offices of each of the new cities.

The Indiana Pacers Basketball Corporation will be responsible for the management of the new franchise. The Indiana and Miami franchises will be added to the Eastern Conference, while Portland and Seattle will become part of the Western Conference.

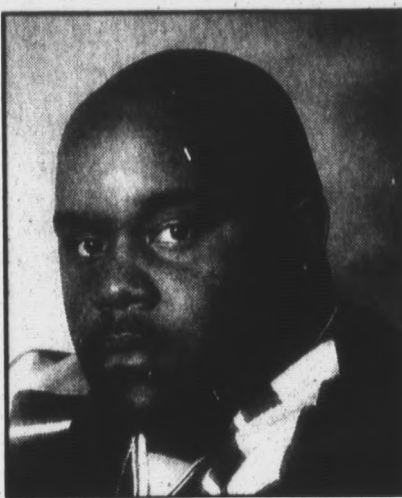

However, the award of operating rights is conditional. The

'In Arlington's House' wrestling set

This year, the FLC is going to open the summer of 1999 with a bang! "In Arlington's House," Mastermind-offers one of the most exciting cards in FLC (Front Loop Crew) wrestling history. The main event, current FLC World Champion "Sycho" takes on former champion Jonathan Smithers in a no holds barred match-up.

FLC International Champion King Ace battles B.M.W. in the second match.

The event will take place in Arlington High School, 4825 N. Arlington Ave., June 11, starting at 7 p.m. Tickets are only $5 at the door.

most significant qualifier is that all four cities will have to sell 5,500 season tickets by October 15, of this year in order to have a team.

According to WNBA president Val Ackerman, adding these cities is another step towards adding strength to the developing League.

"All of (the NBA cities) bring to the WNBA top management and very strong interest in the WNBA and women's basketball and high-end buildings, state-of-the-art arenas, which we believe are important in order for us to present women's basketball in the best possible way," said Ackerman in a conference call to announce the expansion. "In the case of Indianapolis, we have a team that has been very successful on the NBA side, with a very strong front office. We look forward to playing in the Conseco Fieldhouse, which opens in November of this year and the WNBA team will be playing in that building next summer."

"Obviously, Indianapolis is a basketball hotbed, but there is also strong interest in girls and women's basketball as well as evidenced by the AAU programs that operate in Indy and probably the most recent interest, the great crowds the Purdue women's basketball team draws," added Ackerman.

Expansion for 2000 was a part of the recently signed collective bargaining agreement between the owners and the WNBA Player's Association (WNBAPA). Expansion has come sooner than expected, but the early financial success and popularity the WNBA has enjoyed has created increased interest among current NBA owners.

Indiana Pacers Basketball Corp. President Donnie Walsh said the WNBA brings more excitement and opportunity to a city already oozing with Pacers pride.

"This is going to be an exciting team to have here in the city. I am curious to see where all of this is going to go. It's already been successful, so that is not the question but what does it do in the future, to the culture of your community. I am curious to see how this can benefit us," said Walsh. "I think everyone in our city should feel good about this because to a degree we were being judged, our city was being judged by a national group. This is an international sport now."

Walsh will be responsible for setting the WNBA operation. He said he plans to assemble a group in the near future that will determine the team colors, logo and other issues surrounding the franchise. He also said he plans to hire a director of operations and a head coach in the coming months.

Stay tuned.

Blast Update

Busy week for Blast, Blaze

MLS' Colorado Rapids Wednesday, 2 1/2 Games on Friday

This week: The Indiana Blast will be hard at work this week, with an exhibition against the Colorado Rapids of Major League Soccer, an A-League match against the Tennessee Rhythm, and the makeup of the final 43 minutes of the game against Tennessee that was suspended by storms on May 21. The undefeated Indiana Blast women's team hosts W-League powerhouse Chicago on Kuntz Stadium's West Field beginning at 8:30 on Friday.

Last week: The Blast dropped back-to-back games, losing 3-1 in Cincinnati Saturday night, then falling 2-1 in overtime at home to US Pro-40. Indiana's losing streak has now reached three games, during which time the Blast has outshot their opponents 61-37 but been outscored 11-4. Forward Jeff Dresser and Midfielder Amarildo Oliveira have provided the only goals for the Blast in their last three games.

Injury report: Forward Sean Mondelli is doubtful with a quadriceps pull. Midfielder Mark Phillips has returned ahead of schedule from a hamstring pull suffered 5/21, played Sunday, and will start Wednesday night.

Schedule this week: The Blast will practice Tuesday and Thursday morning from 10 a.m. until noon at the MorSports Fields at Lawrence Park. Lawrence Park is located two blocks south of the intersection of East 56th Street and Franklin Road on Indianapolis' East side.

The division race: Surprising US Pro-40 leads the division with 35 points from 12 games, while the Blast are only seven points out of third place. Minnesota continues to lead the league in fewest goals allowed, while Tennessee has won two straight to climb out of the division cellar.

The series with Tennessee: The Blast will be meeting the Rhythm for the fourth time this season. Indiana defeated Tennessee 3-1 in the season opener for both teams on April 24. Their second meeting on Friday May 21st, was suspended in the second half due to lightning. The most recent outing saw the Rhythm defeat the Blast 6-2 at Tennessee.

Rapid fire news: Colorado Rapids stars Marcelo Balboa and Paul Bravo and Blast players Joe Carver, Mark Phillips, Andy Parrish, and Casey Sweeney will be signing autographs from 5-8 p.m. Tuesday at Soccer Unlimited on 620 S. Range Line Road in Carmel. Balboa, Bravo, and Rapids Coach Glenn Myernick will join Blast players for a press conference at Planet Hollywood at 130 S. Illinois at 1pm on Wednesday.

'Combo Night' Friday: The popular "Combo Nights" return this Friday when the Blast face the Tennessee Rhythm on Kuntz Stadium's main field at 7:35pm, while the undefeated BLAZE take on the Chicago Cobras at 8:30pm on the West Field. Tickets for the two game set are just $8 for adults and $4 for youth. This Combo Night will actually feature 2 1/2 games, as the Blast and Rhythm will make up the last 43 minutes of their rain-suspended match from May 21 after the regularly-scheduled game.

Welcome: The BLAST acquired former Evansville University goalkeeper Chuck Browder Tuesday from the Hampton Roads Mariners. Browder, who trained with the Blast during the preseason and made appearances in two scrimmages, will wear #0.

Blaze roll over Rockford: The Indiana Blaze is off to a 3-0 start for the first time in team history after a 3-0 whitewash of the Rockford 'Dactyls' in the home opener last Friday night. Joy Aschenbrener scored a pair of goals and Heather Combs recorded her first shutout since 1997 as the Blaze outshot the 'Dactyls' 31-4. Indiana's toughest test will come this Friday when the Chicago Cobras, currently leading the Central Division of W-1 with a 4-0 record, come to Kuntz Stadium. While Cobras star Charmaine Hooper is preparing for the Women's World Cup with the Canadian National Team, Chicago has not missed a beat, outscoring their opponents 19-1 in four games.

Wedding bells: Blaze Head Coach Marc Behringer will miss Friday night's game while he prepares for his wedding Saturday afternoon to Maria Wodraska. Assistant Coach Sherwin Simon will coach the Blaze in Behringer's absence.

Don't play With fire: The first 2,000 fans through the gates at Kuntz Stadium Friday night will receive free Blaze Fire Safety Posters. The colorful posters, courtesy of Hamada Printing, feature the BLAZE team members posed on an Indianapolis Fire Truck with the firefighters of IFD Station #31. The poster also features fire safety tips for kids and the Blaze 1999 Schedule.

Four-day extravaganza will feature music's best

By DEBORAH BANKS
A&E Editor/Staff Writer

The countdown to one of this summer's high voltage event has begun.

In just a few days, jazz, blues and R&B fans will be able to get an earful of their favorite music during the inaugural Indy Jazz Fest, June 17-20, at various downtown venues.

According to ticket sales, festival organizers are on track with accomplishing their primary goal of rekindling the history of jazz in Indianapolis.

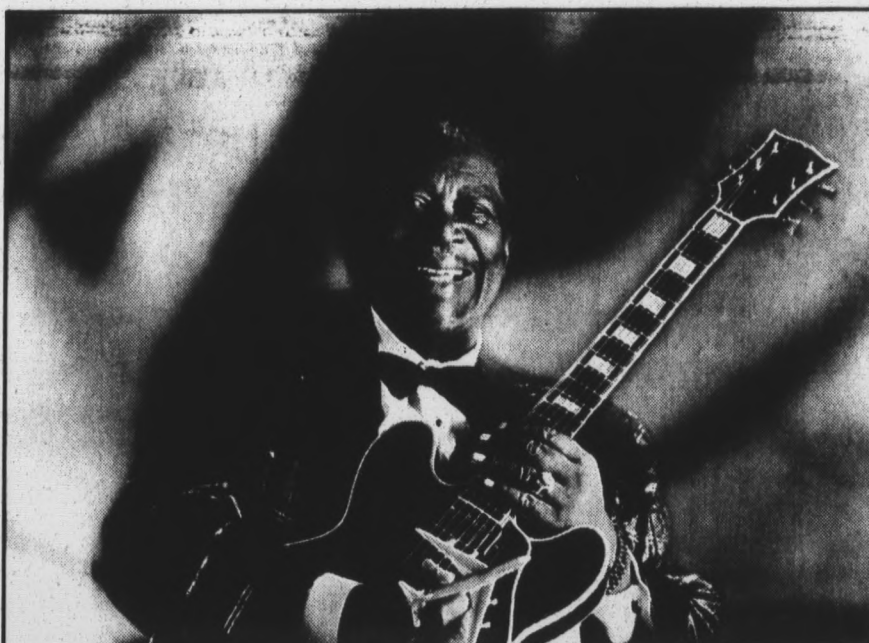

"Sonny Rollins (Madame Walker Theatre, June 19) and Diane Schuur & Maynard Ferguson (Indiana Roof Ballroom June 17) are both close to capacity," said Cameron Smith, director of operations and booking for the event. "Ticket sales are going fantastic and we expect an overwhelming show of support from the community."

With jazz roots reaching back to the 1920s, J.J. Johnson, Wes, Buddy and Monk Montgomery, Freddie Hubbard, Slide Hampton, Larry Riddle, Jimmy Spaulding, Leroy Vinnegar and David Baker, got there first break on the stomping grounds on Indiana Avenue in the 1940s.

ISO concert to honor one of the finest intellects of our time

By DEBORAH BANKS
A&E Editor/Staff Writer

Former Indiana resident, Avery Brooks will make an appearance in Indianapolis on Sunday to take part in The Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra's (ISO) benefit concert.

Proceeds from the June 13 concert titled, Hopes and Promises will go to the Martin Luther King Multi-Service Center.

The purpose of the concert is to celebrate the ideas of Dr. King including his desire to build a connected community.

Brooks, an internationally-known star of stage, screen and television, will recite various passages from Dr. King's essays, letters and speeches woven among the symphonic works.

"This will be a chance for people to listen to his words without the soundbites we're used to," Brooks said. "His words speak for themselves. He spoke eloquently as anyone - messages of hope."

Brooks said when asked to participate in the event he did not hesitate.

"I've always celebrated the culture, so it's only fitting when I have the opportunity, to do it," continued Brooks. "Wherever I can be of service is where I'll be."

The essays that Brooks will read are taken from various forms, including Dr. King's letters from Birmingham jail.

Thomas N. Atkins, ISO director of public relations agrees with Avery, who said the event is about conveying a message of hope.

"The Indianapolis Symphony Orchestra is proud to be a part of such a meaningful event in our community," Atkins said. "Everyone was inspired and uplifted by the messages delivered by the late Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., and it is an honor to be able to blend our music with Dr. King's words in order to keep his ideals alive today."

"The title, Hopes and Promises, is not just a slogan; it's a credo for all of us."

Other featured guests scheduled to participate include William Henry Curry, guest conductor, associate conductor, North Carolina Symphony, communicating the language of the Orchestra.

Jenifer Lewis premieres in LifeTime original movie

Best known for her sharp-tongued humor in The Preacher's Wife and What's Love Got to Do With It, Jenifer Lewis will premiere in the LifeTime Television original movie, Jackie's Back, on June 14 at 9 p.m.

Directed by Robert Townsend, the movie is a "mockumentary," which chronicles the bizarre life and twisted career of an outrageous pop diva on the eve of her attempted comeback concert in Hollywood.

Tim Curry plays the pretentious documentarian who has been assigned to chronicle Jackie's triumphant return to the stage, but finds that she has as much attitude as she has talent and as many enemies as she has fans.

The movie also includes appearances by Diahann Carroll, Whoopi Goldberg, Bette Midler, Isabel Sanford, Mary Wilson, Dolly Parton, Ricki Lake and Robert Townsend.

Claremont dad wants Toni Morrison book banned

CLAREMONT, N.H. (AP) - A parent of a Stevens High School student is trying to get a novel by prize-winning author Toni Morrison banned from his daughter's school.

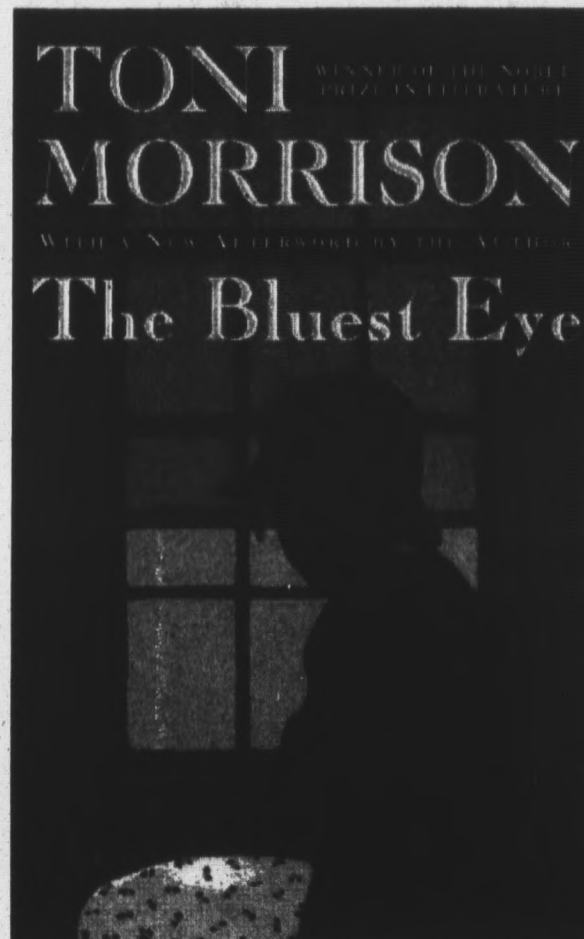

Keith Gaudette said the book "The Bluest Eye" contains inappropriate sexual content. The novel, which describes a young Black girl growing up in an abusive family in the 1940s, is required reading in freshman English classes at the school. "It's pornography," Gaudette said. "It's very explicit. I was stunned this material would be placed in the hands of our kids."

Assistant Principal Susan Chandler said if Gaudette files a formal complaint, the book will be referred to a committee of teachers, parents, administrators and students for review.

The committee's decisions can be appealed to the school board or superintendent, she said.

Gaudette said he plans to file the complaint, but he would rather have the book banned immediately. "I have five children," he said. "I wouldn't want any of them to read it."

Morrison won the 1988 Pulitzer Prize for her novel "Beloved" and the Nobel Prize in literature in 1993 for her entire body of works. She was the first American woman to win the Nobel since 1938 and the first Black American to ever earn the honor. "The Bluest Eye" was her first novel, published in 1970.

Gaudette said he objects to three scenes that describe sexual intercourse and another section in which a minister is depicted as having sexual thoughts. He said his daughter was shocked by the material.

"It's really bothered me because our kids aren't allowed to take an aspirin into school without permission," he said. "Our education system should be kept sterile. There's so much on television and everywhere, this is one place this stuff shouldn't be kept."

Two months ago, the Unity school board banned Maya Angelou's autobiography "I Know Why the Caged Bird Sings" at the request of parents, who objected to a passage in which Angelou described how her mother's boyfriend raped her when she was eight.

JAZZ

The four-day jazz extravaganza show will feature signature tunes such as "Saxophone Colossus" by Sonny Rollins; "My Funny Valentine" and "Someday My Prince Will Come," by Slide Hampton and "Don't Worry Be Happy," by Bobby McFerrin.

Other known names in the musical industry set to appear during Jazz Fest include: Issac Hayes, George Benson, Bruce Hornsby, Cubanismo, among others.

Maribeth Smith, event coordinator, said organizers are working around the clock, training more than 700 volunteers.

"The reception from the community has been great," Smith said. "Indianapolis is ready for such an event, been ready, we just want to make sure it's worth their visits."

Tickets for the weekend musical extravaganza are on sale at the RCA Dome Box Office and all Ticketmaster outlets, including Kroger Food Stores, Karma Records and L.S. Ayres Department Stores.

Brian McKnight: Being himself puts him head and shoulders above the rest

THE SCOOP

It seems like every time we turn around there's some industry event that we're expected to go to. Usually the people are nice, and so is the decor, but the food sucks. One thing these events are excellent for is soundbites. Lots and lots of soundbites.

We were in the house at the BMI Pop Awards a little while back and we ran into Brian McKnight and y'all will be happy to know that he's going to be hitting us in the head with some new material pretty soon.

"I got a new record coming out this summer. I've been working nonstop on that and I haven't had anytime to stop and think about anything else. The first single will be out in June and the record will be out in August or so. That's all that I've been doing. I really wanted to focus on that. I think I really came back with what people are expecting from me. It'll be kind of hard after 'Anytime.'"

Brian McKnight may not look that old, but he's been in the game for ten years. Every time we turn around there's some new soul singing cat that's trying to be the next Marvin Gaye, but Brian says that he's head and shoulders above those guys.

"I've been in this for ten years and I'm still trying to do what I want to do on my own terms. See, the thing is, you can't follow the trend. You have to be a trendsetter. You have to be ahead of everybody. I don't try to come behind everybody else and do the same old thing. I do the same thing that I've been doing. I write songs and I leave it at that. I really don't think in terms of what I try to do to be different from everybody else. I just try to be myself."

Brian McKnight

Brian says the first single from the album is out now and it's called "Tell Me" and, oh yeah, the album is titled Back At One. We all know Brian can sing, but the fact that he's a tall, dark and mellow fellow makes him a shoe-in for television and film. He says that's something he'll try to concentrate on more in the future. "Right now (film and TV roles) are in the talks. There's a lot of things happening. I'm concentrating on music."

Newsbits

R&B trio 702 is currently enjoying a Top 10 hit with its new single, the Missy Elliott-produced "Where My Girls At," and the group now plans to take its women's anthem to the WNBA basketball court. 702 will perform the song on June 10 at the Great Western Forum in Inglewood, California during the halftime of the Los Angeles Sparks' home opener against the Sacramento Monarchs. 702 is due to release its self-titled sophomore album on June 15.

Seems as if Missy "Misdemeanor" Elliott is fighting the proverbial battle of good and bad with herself. You see, Elliott is said to be a devout Baptist, but her raps often include raunchy behavior and foul language.

"I go through battles where I'm like, 'Dag, I'm still cussing on albums, and I don't wanna cuss no more,'" she told Spin magazine in their July issue. "I'm trying to get it together. I stopped doing a lot of things - I won't drink and I don't smoke. But I don't want people to be like, 'Okay, now she's Reverend Elliott.'" (Hmmm, sounds like Missy has developed an R. Kelly syndrome. Better call Kirk Franklin!)

Motivational note

To keep a relationship strong remember these points, try to be honest without being vicious, be mutual without invading the other's privacy, be trusting without being blind, be respectful without idolizing, share without controlling, love without possessing. If you trust too soon, you are probably afraid of being rejected. If you trust too superficially, you may easily be betrayed.

If you trust too late, you may never know what love is. If there is no trust, prayer, laughter, communication or shared interests and planning, your relationship is on shaky ground. If a loving and strong relationships is your goal, work on these qualities within yourself.

Learn from past lessons. If your heart has been wounded in the past, let it heal and find yourself before you look for someone else new. - Jewel Diamond Taylor, www.jeweldiamondtaylor.com.

YE 'keeps it real' with Eastside block party

By BARATO BRITT
Staff Writer

Once again it's "on and popp'in" on the city's Eastside. In keeping with their theme of reaching out to youth while networking amongst themselves, Young Entrepreneurs, a collection of the city's finest young Black businessmen and women, will meet that goal of outreach through entertainment with one of the most live outdoor outings the Eastside has ever seen.

On June 20, YE will hold its First Annual Far Eastside Expo at Raintree Plaza.

The day-long event will feature a fashion and hair show, a continuous day-long concert showcasing the city's hottest acts and a "Battle of the DJ's" exhibition. The expo will also feature various vendors, booths and a job fair.

Already dubbed "the Cadillac of all events," the Expo is the second event YE has put on this year in the effort to mentor to youth. The first, a charity basketball tournament, packed the Arlington High School gymnasium as the city's barbershops went at it on the hardwood.

For YE founders Tommy "Smalls" Harris and Dennis "Goldie" Sweatt, YE's second endeavor is the result of months of hard work and organizing, but a "phat" Eastside party that may possibly save youth is well worth it, they said.

"We're still trying to show youth they can do what were doing," said Harris, who is also the proprietor of Tommy's Hair Studio. "We want our kids to look up to us instead of the drug dealers."

"This is the first time (YE) has really been able to converge on one spot. This is about unity," he added. "With this we want to show that we're out here. We've made it, God has given us the chance and the responsibility to motivate our kids."

The expo, according to YE, is designed to meet three outreach goals. First and foremost, YE wants to show at risk inner city youth that they don't need to turn to "the underground economy" to attain their desires. Secondly, YE wants to create a coalition of young Black entrepreneurs to network with and share resources. Currently, YE boasts several Black businesses to its growing coalition, including R&S Menswear and Powerhouse Records, who will be handling the fashion shows and entertainment, respectively. Finally, the group will use the expo as an announcement, of sorts, to their predecessors, the city's most tenured Black entrepreneurs.

That announcement, according to Harris, is that YE is here and is serious about being a viable community presence.

"We want the older Black businesses to come and talk to us," Harris said. "We feel they can tell us if we're doing anything wrong. Also, we feel we can help them reach our generation. Basically, we are just looking to help each other."

Since YE has offered its brand of outreach to community youth, they have presented a side seldom seen by those they are trying to reach. Instead of the traditional means, YE first introduces kids to the "finer things" many inner city youth want to acquire, such as rimmed up cars with "booming systems," hot fades, gold chains and the latest in fashion. Once they have youth's attention, they begin to mentor in a way they hope will last a lifetime.

When teaching community youth, the entrepreneurs of YE do not sugar coat the truths of growing up Black in the inner city. Like many who have come up in the most degenerate areas, some YE personnel offer to kids their experiences and dealings with law enforcement and a system believed to be unfair to young Black males.

"These kids want to see glamour," said Sweatt, owner of Goldie Productions. "If you're sitting there just lecturing to them, they won't listen. We're telling kids, if you see something expensive you like, that's okay. You're supposed to want fine things, and you can do it if you work hard for it."

As a group still on the rise, these young Blacks don't seek recognition for their efforts. For YE, all they want is to get everyone together to kick it in an entertaining manner. In fact, according to Sweatt, as long as people have a good time through the expo and other YE events, knowing who pulled it off is secondary.

"People always say to go out and do something positive," Sweatt said. "We're doing that and at the same time, we're challenging people to do something better. But if you do something, do it for the community. Right now, this thing is gold, we are looking for ways to make it platinum."

"We want anybody from anywhere to just come out and vibe together," Harris added. "And, if this works, one day we want the kids to say they can remember a time when Black men got some fun events going for the community. That's why we're doing this."

Although the plate is full for the first annual expo, YE is still offering booth space at a nominal fee. The organization is also allowing anyone who feels they have entertainment skills to perform for what looks to be a live crowd.

Crispus Attucks Alumni honors generals with Indy roots

By A.L.A.
Recorder Correspondent

The Crispus Attucks Alumni Association, in conjunction with the Indianapolis Urban League, presented "A Salute to the Generals" to honor U.S. Army Maj. Gen. Harry W. Brooks Jr. and U.S. Air Force Brig. Gen. Norris Webster Overton, former Attucks' graduates. The June 10 event included a private reception for sponsors and special guests, and the unveiling of busts of the generals at the War Memorial. For those who purchased tickets, a lunch was served at the Omega Center, and 11th and 12th streets were dedicated in honor of the generals.

The salute was part of the Ninth Biennial Crispus Attucks National Alumni Convention, which takes place June 11 and 12 at the Indiana Convention Center and RCA Dome.

Robert Jackson, a retired India-

Gen. Norris Webster Overton

napolis Police officer and chairman of the event, said that it was all his idea. "There are a lot of people all over that went to Attucks, who many think that's all they did," he commented. "We all know the sports' guys (from Attucks), but there are many others who have accomplished great things. This also brings more credence to the national (alumni) to raise the awareness that top level Black Americans have roots in this city."

Brooks, a 29-year veteran of the Korean and Vietnam conflicts, has earned several awards and decorations, including the Distinguished Service Medal, the Meritorious Service Medal, two Legion of Merit medals, two Bronze Star medals, and seven Air Medals. Additionally, he was decorated with the Republic of Vietnam's Cross of Gallantry and the Republic of Korea's Order of National Security Merit.

"I can't tell you how enthused and pleased they both were about this salute," Jackson continued. "Gen. Brooks had some small appearances, but nothing this big."

Is your child waiting to explode?

By SONIA STEWART

(NNPA) - Many of us are wondering what we can do as parents and educators to ensure school safety in the wake of the Columbine High School shootings. The first step is to know if your child is holding grudges and resentments against others, or just plain not getting along socially. Find out if your child is fitting in socially, in and out of school. You can use this social development checklist to find out.

The Social Development Checklist

Is your child:

- Usually in a positive mood?
- Usually goes to school willingly?

Does your child:

- Have a positive relationship with one or two peers; show capacity to really care about them?
- Display a sense of humor?
- Not seem to be lonely?

Your child is:

- Usually accepted versus neglected or rejected by other children?
- Invited by other children to join them in play and friendship activities?

Does your child usually:

- Approach others with a positive attitude?
- Express himself clearly, give reasons for actions and opinions?
- Assert her rights and needs appropriately?
- Not easily intimidated by bullies?
- Express frustrations and anger effectively and without harming others or property?
- Gain access to ongoing groups at play?
- Take turns fairly easily?
- Compromise with others appropriately?
- Avoid drawing inappropriate attention to self?
- Interact non-verbally with other children with smiles, waves, nods, etc.?

Is your child's school safe?

Find out what your child's school needs to do, to ensure safety. To request a copy of the School Violence Prevention Checklist, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to this address: Concerned Parents Council, School Violence Prevention Checklist, 120-8M Casals Place, New York, N.Y., 10475.

After retiring in 1976, Brooks joined Amfac Inc. of Hawaii. He became co-founder of Advanced Consumer Marketing Corporation in 1984, which generated more than $250 million in revenues. He presently serves as chairman of Brooks International.

Equally as impressive, Overton earned a Distinguished Service medal, a Legion of Merit medal with four oak leaf clusters, a Bronze Star medal with two oak leaf clusters, an Air Force Commendation medal with two oak leaf clusters, and a Presidential Unit Citation.

Overton holds a Bachelor of Science degree in accounting from Indiana University, an MBA from the Air Force Institute of Technology, and participated in the Advanced Management Program at Harvard University. He went to work for Amtrak after retiring in 1981. He is now director of business development for Radcor Technology Inc.

According to Jackson, Brooks, Overton and him were all members of Attucks' ROTC. "They were both captains, and I was a sergeant," he remembered. "We were taught that military courtesy is a courtesy among military men. It is not just confined to duty, but extended in all occasions."

When asked if he knew if anyone else had thought to do an event like this, Jackson replied "I'm probably not the only one who has thought about it, but I'm the only one who decided to really do it. I just hope that they (the alumni) know they have made a great contribution, and will continue on this line of honoring other people."

Ameritech repair is slowest of Indiana phone

(AP) - The average Ameritech Indiana customer waited nearly 29 hours for the company to repair a broken phone line in 1998 - double the time it took four years ago, federal records show.

Federal Communications Commission reports also show Ameritech customers were more likely to need their phones fixed again within 30 days of the initial repair in 1998.

The state's next two biggest local phone companies responded much faster. GTE's average response time was 16.7 hours and United Telephone fixed the average home line within 11.8 hours, according to the FCC.

Ameritech blames its slow repairs in part on the exploding demand for second phone lines to hook into home computers. The added work has stretched its technical staff, the company said.

But critics said Ameritech has little incentive to provide fast, effective service because it holds a near-monopoly and because Indiana loosened regulation of the company five years ago in exchange for a 16 percent cut in local service rates.

"You have just a pathetic performance from a company that continues to make obscene profits under deregulation," said Jerry Polk, utility policy coordinator for Citizens Action Coalition, a consumer group.

The Indiana Utility Regulatory Commission is about to revisit that deal and Ameritech's "disappointing" service quality likely will be considered along with its rates, said Mike Leppert, the commission's executive director.

And Leppert said while competition is slowly coming to Ameritech's territory, it isn't here yet. In the meantime, it is the commission's responsibility to make Ameritech improve its service, he said.

It took Ameritech an average of 28.9 hours to fix a residential customer's out-of-service phone line last year.

That is down from 32.6 hours in 1997, but double the 14.4-hour average the company reported in 1994.

Despite the four-hour improvement in its repair times last year, Ameritech remains slower than other Indiana phone companies, and its Indiana Bell unit had the slowest repairs in the Ameritech five-state region.

"When you're last, you're last," Polk said. "You can't be any less last just because your time got faster."

Polk claimed Ameritech treats Indiana as a "stepchild" and a source of profits because the company reports quicker repair times in Ohio, Michigan, Illinois and Wisconsin.

But Ameritech spokesman Dennis McCabe said things are getting better.

During the first quarter of 1999, Ameritech's repair times dropped to 24 hours, compared with 36 hours during the same three months in 1998, he said.

Since the first quarter is usually the worst of the year due to weather, Ameritech hopes to report a big improvement by the end of 1999.

"All we know is we made a commitment to improve our repair times, and we have," McCabe said.

Ameritech reported 322,000 instances of phone lines going down last year. That's service to about 22 percent of its customers - and

One Stop Laundry co-owner Mary Cox said the Easy Card Technology, along with the Laundry's customer service reps, are tools customers enjoy. (Recorder photo by Curtis Guynn)

One Stop Laundry brings innovation, service to Eastside neighborhood

By BARATO BRITT
Staff Writer

Entrepreneurs Jeffrey and Mary Cox are not satisfied with supplying the community with just one resource.

They also want to bring their Eastside neighborhood into the next millennium via modern technology.

The two achieve that task through One Stop Laundry, a new Black-owned Laundry facility on the Near Eastside, the first in the city to use the reusable Easy Cards System rather than cumbersome coins.

The new business celebrated its grand opening last week, introducing the community not only to the technological advancement, but adding another Black-owned enterprise to the struggling area.

"I've seen businesses come and go," said Mary, who is also a resident of that neighborhood. "But, I also know you have to put a lot into your business and your community. Since we live in the neighborhood, we've seen it go up and down and we just said to ourselves, 'let's do it.'"

"The neighborhood wants this," she added. "This is a ripe area where neighborhood people can just walk to. And, once we get them through the doors, we can keep them."

Since venturing to bring the laundry service to the neighborhood over three years ago, Cox admitted she heard skepticism from various organizations that said placing a business in that area was not fiscally sound. However, according to a recent survey conducted by the United North East Community Development Corporation, neighborhood residents recorded a laundry facility as one of that area's top 10 needs, although there are several in surrounding neighborhoods.

According to Cox, early numbers indicate the survey finding were sound, as customers have already expressed rave compliments

Cash flow financing reigns for fast growth

America's fastest growing companies are ratcheting up planned new investments, but their number of new bank loans remains both modest and flat - despite interest rates that are far more attractive this year than last.

What is happening is that with a robust economy and improving margins, cash flow financing is king. However, a small but growing number of CEOs are adding new flexibility to their financing strategy by establishing or increasing their bank credit.

Increasing new business investments, but little new borrowing

CEOs of 451 product and service companies identified in the media as the fastest growing U.S. businesses over the last five years were questioned by PricewaterhouseCoopers for its latest Indiana Trendsetter Barometer survey.

These CEOs are projecting a revenue gain of 25.7 percent for 1999. To support this breakneck growth 55 percent of them are planning major new investments of capital, with spending amounting to 13.2 percent of composite revenues over the next 12 months.

What the banking community would like to know, though, is with growth like that, what does it take to get these go-go companies to apply for a new loan? Only 23 percent of "Trendsetter" CEOs report completing a new bank loan in the fourth quarter, down from 27 percent at mid-year, and unchanged from a year ago. It's not that the Fed and bankers everywhere aren't doing their part: over the past 12 months, the interest rate paid by these companies has grown ever more attractive, dropping to 8.23 percent from 9.21 percent, with the spread above prime shrinking to 0.48 percent from 0.71 percent.

A climate of high confidence
"These are companies with extraordinary potential, and their CEOs are confident in the economy and in their ability to finance much of their own growth," comments Larry Boulet, PricewaterhouseCoopers' partner-in-charge, Middle Market Advisory Services, Indianapolis.

"Today, several roadblocks to the success of these businesses appear to be fading," Boulet adds. "Only 36 percent are concerned about their growth being derailed by slack market demand over the next 12 months, down from 43 percent a year ago. Only 25 percent are worried about profitability, down from 29 percent a year ago. And only 12 percent say lack of capital for expansion could be a problem, off from 26 percent a year ago."

Indeed, the past 12 months have been good to "Trendsetter" companies. Revenue growth has been steady, and there has been little if any degradation in margin strength. Over the past year, 43 percent increased their margins, while only 19 percent saw their margins decline, for a net of 24 percent oil the up side-level with a year ago. "Steady growth and healthy margins are conditions, that just naturally encourage self-financing," notes Roulet.

Good news for bankers

But while some "Trendsetter" CEOs may not be seeking loans, all increasing number are bolstering their financial resources by developing their bank credit. Credit development increased among 27 percent of "Trendsetter" companies in the fourth quarter, and decreased for only one percent - for a net of 26 percent increasing 3 points higher than a year ago. And the amount of their composite - credit increase was 12.8 percent of revenues, versus 11.0 percent last year, or 16 percent higher. "In today's go-go environment, these prudent CEOs now have, added flexibility to respond quickly if an opportunity arises, or if circumstances change," notes Mr. Boulet.

Plant and Engineering and Maintenance Show

The 4th Annual Plant and Engineering and Maintenance Show (IPEM '99) opened its doors to industry professionals on June 9 and 10, at the Indiana Convention Center & RCA Dome. Occupying over 20,000 square feet of exhibit space, hundreds of companies exhibited millions of dollars worth of equipment in operation, such as computerized maintenance management systems, test and inspection equipment, automation controls, hazardous waste management systems, protective coatings, corrosion control products, flooring and roofing systems, and energy management systems.

The show was presented by Professional Trade Shows, Inc. (PTS), the nation's leading producer of regional plant engineering and maintenance shows, with over 50 events across the U.S. and Mexico. According to Charles Caruso, president of PTS, the popularity of these shows has hinged on the success of the regional format.

Running concurrently with the trade show exhibits was an extensive two-day conference. Industry experts contributed valuable information by discussing facility problems and practical solutions to increase plant efficiency. The conference consisted of consecutive one-hour sessions over the two-day period.

Hale named interim Cinergy/PSI president

Cinergy Corp. announced that Joe Hale, president of the Cinergy Foundation and Cinergy vice president of Corporate Communications, has been appointed interim president of the company's PSI Energy subsidiary.

Hale will serve as president while a search is underway for a replacement for current PSI President John Mutz, who retired from full-time service with the company May 31.

Hale will assume the position's day-to-day responsibilities, including community affairs and economic development, while Mutz will continue to play a central role with the company as vice chairman of PSI and an adviser on public policy, in particular Indiana legislation introducing competition into the electric industry.

KeyBank names Boudoin community mortgage specialist

Sherry Boudoin has been named Community Mortgage Specialist, CRA at KeyBank in Indianapolis. Boudoin is responsible for originating mortgage loans; developing and building relationships with Realtors, mortgage brokers, and builders; and being involved in community organizations and activities. Previously, Boudoin was a relationship manager at KeyBank.

Boudoin is a graduate of Ball State University where she earned a degree in marketing with a minor in telecommunications. Active in the community, Boudoin is a member of the Indianapolis Urban Bankers, Black Expo Members Club, Indianapolis Birthing Project, and North Central Church of Christ. She also works with community organizations such as INHP SEND, Anderson CAC, Indianapolis Development Association, and Kokomo CAC Kings Park.

IBE opens doors for community

To promote the organization and upcoming events such as the Summer Celebration and the Dustbowl, the Indiana Black Expo presented an open house June 4. The organization, through the event, allowed citizens and supporters to tour the office as well as win prizes for the upcoming Expo events.

On hand to participate in the activity was WTLA's Guy Black and Ramona Holloway, First Lady Judy O'Bannon and the Hoosier Millennium Task Force as well as various other media. (Recorder photo by Curtis Guynn)

Money available for home improvement grants, subsidized loans

Most homeowners are unaware that regardless of their income there are Federal, state and local programs that will help them repair and remodel their homes.

Government at all levels recognizes that neighborhoods are the basis of life in our country. When a neighborhood deteriorates, many things happen both physically and socially. When the homes look shabby, a neighborhood seems to attract criminals and crime. An area in decline is like a spreading cancer. As homes deteriorate and become shabby looking and in need of maintenance, the residents lose their desire to keep up the neighborhood. Streets become receptacles for trash, schools lower their standards and very quickly the selling price of homes in the area drops sharply, accelerating this cycle of degeneration.

In order to keep and maintain the nation's housing and neighborhoods, government at all levels have programs to provide homeowners money (that does not have to be repaid) for repairs or to lend them money at below market levels or at no interest. In many areas, utility companies will either do energy conservation work free or at low cost. Other organizations will lend homeowners money at no interest to pay the contractor of their choice for the necessary work. In addition there are tax incentives to promote efficient energy use.

MONEY

These programs are not restricted to low-income people, slum areas or urban neighborhoods. Owners of single or multifamily dwellings are eligible.

Some of the other home improvements covered under these programs are: attic and wall insulation, new windows, outer wall siding, security doors, and locks, window guards, sidewalks and masonry work, bathrooms and kitchens, electrical and plumbing, new roofs, gutters, and downspouts.

Consumer Education Research Center, a national non-profit consumer group formed in 1969, has just published the 192 large-page, Consumers Guide to Home Repair Grants and Subsidized Loans. The book lists over 6,000 sources of loan and grant programs offered by federal, state and local governments, utility companies and others. It describes typical programs offered and the how to qualify.

Indiana Black Expo Economic Development Corporation (IBEDC), in partnership with the Indiana State Fair Commission, Davis Homes, National City Bank, Goldstar Investments, City of Indianapolis, Paige's Inc., and Indiana Black Expo, Inc. broke ground on its latest venture, the Expo Village recently.

The Village will feature eight newly-constructed three bedroom, two bath and one car garage homes; as well as the rehabilitation of three houses, located on the site.

The Indiana Black Expo Eco-

nomie Development Corporation's mission is to uplift the human condition by empowering families, providing affordable housing, creating employment and educational opportunities, as well as engaging in historical preservation.

'99 economy to be strong, Chicago fed auto symposium participants say

The Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago held its sixth annual Auto Outlook Symposium in Detroit on Friday, May 28, 1999. This symposium draws participants from vehicle manufacturers, suppliers, analysts, and consultants. One part of the symposium involves the generation of a consensus economic outlook. This year 29 individuals participated in the outlook for many components of real Gross Domestic Product, as well as several key statistics for the U.S. economy.

The symposium group is expecting a very good economic year for 1999. The outlook for next year suggests that the economy will pull back to more historical growth rates.

for the business and its innovations.

Additionally, being the first in the city to offer the reusable card system (no washer or dryer takes coins), Cox and company knew that offering the service would require a special sort of selling tactic. To meet that task, One Stop has specially selected, consumer friendly customer service representatives on hand to teach those who are in need of assistance.

"One of the things distributors said when we decided to do (the cards) was 'you want to do that here?'" she said. "People come and they're excited. They see the differences and for the most part like it. I'm not going to say 100 percent everybody loves it, but mostly, they're excited to see this."

Now that One Stop has officially celebrated its grand opening, Cox said it could get down to business, the business of networking the community with resources, that is. Cox said one of the goals of the business is to connect neighborhood citizens with local organizations; in essence being an outlet for more than just simply laundry service.

In fact, she added, that is the very basis of the business' name.

"We want to work with agencies that are trying to get people established," Cox said. "We want to have a second thing that we can offer our patrons, that's why we're trying to bring neighborhood businesses together."

"We understand how this neighborhood is looked upon," she continued. "We will grow, and as we do, we're giving back at the same time."

Currently, the One Stop displays various organization pamphlets and university brochures for the community's perusal. And, in keeping with their goal of good customer service, the Cox's, and their CSR's will often refer customers to any relevant information if available.

One of the future endeavors Cox plans to do with One Stop is to provide stipends for those in need of the service that can ill-afford it.

But for now, Cox and company are satisfied with their fledgling business' service, because they know they've provided their own community with something otherwise unavailable.

"It's good to be able to bring that to our community first," she said.

Located at 3760 N. Emerson Ave., One Stop Laundry is open Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m., and Sunday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. For additional information, call 549-0133.

many of those probably were repeat problems.

The FCC has phone companies report how often they have to send a repair worker to a residence more than once in a 30-day period.

Ameritech Indiana repair crews were called back to a home in 15 percent of the cases. GTE had to make two service trips 14 percent of the time. United Telephone, a Sprint company, had a 10 percent rate.

According to Ameritech surveys, 11.7 percent of its customers said they were dissatisfied with repair service last year, compared with 8.1 percent in 1996.

PUBLIC NOTICE

LEGAL NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING
PROJECT DES. #9785660
The City of Indianapolis Department of Capital Asset Management will hold a public hearing on Thursday, June 24, 1999, at 5:30 p.m. in the Community Room of the West Indianapolis Public Library, 1216 S. Kappes Street, Indianapolis, Indiana 46221.
The purpose of the public hearing is to offer all interested persons an opportunity to comment on current design plans for the proposed widening and improvements of South Harding Street from Hanna Avenue to Raymond Street.
This project will widen Harding Street from two lanes to four lanes from Hanna Avenue to Raymond Street. The existing horizontal and vertical alignments of the roadway will be maintained for the majority of the project. The southern 500 meters (1600 feet) of the project will be shifted eastward a maximum of 3.3 meters (11 feet) to avoid impacts to a historical building. The existing pavement will be rehabilitated and widened. The project also will include the construction of curb and gutters, along with storm sewers. Sidewalks will not be placed as a part of this project. The existing traffic signals at Troy Avenue and Hudnut Drive will be modernized. The bridge over White River will be widened from 13.411 meters (44 feet) to 15.995 meters (52 feet 6 inches).
The acquisition of approximately 0.5 hectares (1.2 acres) of permanent right-of-way will be required for this project. The relocation of one (1) building will be required as a part of this project. A small amount of temporary right-of-way also will be required for driveway construction and building removal.
The total project length is approximately 2.562 kilometers (1.6 miles). A formal presentation will be given at 5:30 p.m. Displays detailing the proposed project will be available. Comments and written statements will be accepted. The tentative timetables for right-of-way acquisition and construction will be discussed during the formal presentation. A public statement session will be offered after the presentation prior to the public hearing. Individuals may ask to participate in the public statement session prior to the presentation.
An area will be provided with comment sheets and an audio recorder to take public comments for the official record. Anyone wishing to drop off or record a comment can do so. All comments and materials collected at the hearing will be evaluated and addressed in the final design study report. Written statements and exhibits also will be submitted to the Public Information Office, Department of Capital Asset Management, City of Indianapolis, 200 E. Washington Street, Room 2360, Indianapolis, Indiana 46204, for a period of two (2) weeks following the hearing. An informal session with displays will be available for interested person to walk in and discuss with professional engineers any concerns they may have about the proposal. Conversations will not be part of the official record.
An environmental document and preliminary design plans along with other materials on the proposed project are available for public viewing during normal business hours in the following offices:
1. Project Management, Department of Capital Asset Management, City of Indianapolis, 604 N. Sherman Drive, Indianapolis, Indiana 46201 (317/327-8431).
2. R. W. Armstrong & Associates, 2801 S. Pennsylvania Street, Indianapolis, Indiana 46225 (317/786-0461).
This notice is published in compliance with Title 23, Code of Federal Regulations, Section 771.111(h) entitled Early Coordination, Public Involvement and Project Development, and the Indiana Public Involvement/Public Hearing Procedures for Federal-Aid Project Development approval by the Federal Highway Administration, U.S. Department of Transportation, on July 8, 1997.
